Carter, Ford plan orderly transfer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jimmy Carter, the victorious challenger, and Gerald Ford, the vanquished President, both exhausted by their battle for the White House, are planning vacations before the rites of passage that mark the transfer of presidential power.

Carter was meeting today with Vice President-elect Walter F. Mondale, who scheduled a flight to Plains, Ga., for their first conference since the election.

The 52-year-old Georgia peanut farmer and former governor, who spent nearly two years in his pursuit of the White House, said as he claimed his victory in the wee hours of Wednesday morning that he was pledging himself to "the unification of our country."

It will be up to the two winners, their staffs and the staff of Ford's White House to work out details of the transfer of the control of government from the defeated Republican president to the victorious presidentelect.

The margin of victory was a narrow one, and a final tabulation of the electoral vote still could not be made more than 24 hours after the final vote had been cast.

While the principals in the fight for the right to lead the United States into its third century accepted the results of Tuesday's election and planned for the orderly transfer of power, vote counting continued in widely scattered areas.

In two states, Ohio with 26 electoral votes and Oregon with six, the results in the presidential race remained too close to call. Carter had such narrow leads in both states that his advantage in either could be overturned by absentee ballots still being tallied.

But the balloting in neither state could change the outcome of the election, which Carter had won in the early hours of Wednesday. Without counting the two states still listed as uncertain, Carter carried 22 states and the District of Columbia with a total of 272 electoral votes, two more than the 270 needed for election.

Ford carried 26 states with a total of 235 electoral votes.

Here was the popular vote total with all the nation's precincts reporting:

Carter 40,263,549 or 51 per cent.

Ford 38,512,666 or 48 per cent.

The numbers indicated that 53 per cent of the Americans who were eligibile to vote in Tuesday's election cast ballots, contradicting predictions that apathy was the ruling factor and projections that voter turnout would be a record low.

The number of voters who did show up at the polls turned out to be the smallest number since 1948.

Ford and Carter, showing the strain of the long campaign, begin their holidays this weekend.

Carter said his first task would be "the unification of our country after a close and hardfought election." He expressed his gratitude for Ford's pledge of "complete and whole-hearted support."

Meanwhile, Carter planned to receive a blueprint made up by his key advisers to ease the change of adminisrations. Among the recommendations is that Carter desert his Plains home for most of each week and set up offices almost at once in Washington.

Carter already has said he plans to set up a transitional office in Washington right away.

President Ford publicly conceded dfeat shortly after noon on Wednesday. Earlier in the day he had called Carter in Plains tocongratulate him.

But Ford supporters said the President's voice was so hoarse from his campaign efforts that his chief of staff, Richard Cheney, had to relay the message.

Carter, in a statement from Plains, said, "I deeply appreciate the President's call and his gracious expression of congratulations and cooperation. I expressed my admiration for him and for the strong, wellplanned and effective campaign that he ran."

Carter said he would take full advantage of Ford's offer of cooperation during the transition period.

In Washington, his voice barely above a whisper, Ford told reporters at the White House that in the 78 days until Carter's inauguration on Jan. 20 "there's a lot of work to do and we're going to keep on doing it."

White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said Ford plans to continue pursuing an arms limitation agreement with the Soviet Union as well as peace initiatives in the Middle East and Southern Africa.

On domestic policy, Nessen noted that the outgoing president still has responsibility for submitting a proposal for a fiscal 1978 budget to Congress shortly after it convenes in January.

After that, Ford, who spent 25 years in Congress before being elevated to the White House after the resignation of Richard Nixon, has no definite plans, Nessen said.

"He's talked of an interest in teaching political science at a university," Nessen said.

Ford plans to leave Sunday for a week-long vacation in Palm Springs, Calif.

Mondale and Carter have talked on the telephone but have not seen each other since the balloting.

Mondale was in Minneapolis on Wednesday, where he said the efforts toward a government transition were well underway. He said he planned on having a "significant role" in Carter's administration.

After spending the day relaxing with his family, the vice president-elect met with reporters and said he hoped to work effectively with the Senate, which will be made up largely of fellow Democrats.

There was one quick negative reaction to Carter's election. Wall Street analysts said the stock market, with its normal GOP leanings, was jolted by the Democratic win. They blamed a 16-point decline in the Dow Jones average on the Carter election. The market cut those losses by almost half that amount by the time trading ended.

Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas, the losing vice presidential candidate, returned to Washington on Wednesday. He said he doesn't believe the defeat of the Ford+Dole ticket is a sign the country is moving leftward politically.

"The majority of the country is moderate to conservative," Dole told a news conference. "Southern pride prevailed, not liberalism."

When Carter takes office in January, it will put the Democrats in control of the two elected branches of the federal government for the first time since 1969, when Democrat Lyndon B. Johnson turned over the White House to Richard M. Nixon, a Republican whose party was the minority in Congress.

The party lineup in the Senate remained 62 Democrats to 38 Republicans following Tuesday's elections, even though there was an unusually high turnover among senators. Seventeen new senators will take seats in January, eight Democrats and nine Republicans. Eight of the new faces will replace veterans who didn't run for reelection. But the other nine defeated incumbents.

In the House, Democrats may add as many as three seats to the 290 to 145 majority they held in the last Congress. Five House races are not decided. The Democrats hold a slim lead in four of those. In races decided so far, the lineup is 288 Democrats and 142 Republicans.

The Democrats picked up one more governship to bring their total to 37. There now are only 12 Republican governors and one independent.

But the Republicans won the gubernatorial race in the biggest state that elected a chief executive on Tuesday. James Thompson, a former prosecutor, won big in Illinois to give control of that state's administration back to the GOP after four years in Democratic hands.

Wholesale prices rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Higher costs for automobiles, fuel and other industrial goods boosted wholesale prices by six-tenths of a per cent in October, marking the second consecutive big monthly increase, the government said today.

The rise was smaller than the nine-tenths of a per cent increase in September, but still was the third-sharpest monthly increase this year and by no means good news for the incoming Carter administration.

Only a decline in agricultural prices kept the wholesale price index from rising more sharply.

The Labor Department said industrial prices surged 1 per cent higher last month, the largest one-month increase since last October when they rose 1.2 per cent. Thee prices have continued rising at a rapid rate since last June.

Economists are usually more concerned about price trends for industrial commodities as an indication of the underlying inflationary pressures in the economy since they are less volatile than farm prices.

Farm prices were down 1.2 per cent in October after rising 1.9 per cent in September. They had declined in both July and August. Prices for processed foods and feeds also dropped in October, declining seven-tenths of a per cent.

The Wholesale Price Index stood at 185.2 in October, meaning that goods selling for $100 at wholesale in 1967 now cost $185.20. Wholesale price changes usually are reflected, after a lag, in consumer prices, although the linkage is not precise.

October's six-tenths of a per cent increase, adjusted for seasonal factors, translate into an annual rate of 7.4 per cent. In absolute terms, wholesale prices rose three-tenths of a per cent last month.

The latest price report indicated that inflationary pressures are still strong in the economy.

Most economists believe that inflation as measured by consumer prices will increase about 5 to 6 per cent this year. That would be a slight improvement from the 7 per cent rate in 1975 but still would be high by historic standards.

The surge in industrial prices reflected hikes in transportation equipment, especially the 1977 model cars and trucks. Most vehicles and other equipment rose in cost 3.6 per cent last month, the government said.

Sharp increases also were reported for most fuel products, including crude petroleum and natural gas. Prices also rose for lumber and wood products, rubber, machinery and metal products.

Declining prices for hogs and grains led the 1.2 per cent drop in farm prices. Oil seeds and cocoa bean prices also declined last month following big increases in September. These more than offset increases for cattle, eggs, coffee and ruits and vegetables.

Especially significant for future trends was the 4 per cent price increase for crude materials in October. Price movements for these materials, the first step in the price chain, usually signal broader trends several months in advance.

Wholesale prices of consumer foods -- basically the prices paid by supermarkets — declined four-tenths of a per cent following an increase in September and three consecutive months of decline in the summer.

Over the past 12 months, wholesale prices have risen 3.5 per cent, the smallest 12-month increase since November, 1971, when they rose 3.3 per cent during a period of government controls.

Industrial prices have risen 6.6 per cent over the past year while farm prices were 5.4 per cent lower and processed foods and feeds were down 6.1 per cent.

Smoke causes 7-vehicle crash

A Texas woman was injured in a seven-vehicle chain reaction accident and seven persons were injured in two other area traffic accidents Wednesday and early today, according to the highway patrol.

The seven- vehicle accident occurred at 2 p.m. Wednesday on Interstate 55 two miles north of New Madrid when a heavy layer of smoke caused by grass burning on the shoulder of the road blocked the vision of the drivers who were all southbound.

According to the patrol, one vehicle stopped in the middle of the road just over a low hillcrest. A van pulling a camping trailer driven by Harley G. Bradley, 75, of Rocky Ridge came over the hill and was able to stop without hitting the stopped vehicle, but a tractor- trailer truck driven by David E. Glidewell, 24, of Jonesboro, Ark., was unable to stop and struck the van and camping trailer from behind.

A chain reaction collision followed involving a car driven by Ester E. Nisbit, 65, of Arlington, Tex., a car pulling a trailer driven by William J. Kohler, 27, of Fargo, N.D., a pickup truck pulling a boat and trailer driven by Claude N. Curtsinger, 39, of Mayfield, Ky., and cars driven by Gilbert W. Johnson, 31, and Homer M. Rutherford, 72, both of Mount Vernon, Ill.

The Nisbit woman, who suffered moderate injuries, was taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital, then transferred to St. Francis Hospital in Cape Girardeau.

A car- pickup collision caused minor injuries to both drivers at 5:30 p.m. at the junction of Route C and Highway 91 at Advance in Stoddard County.

The patrol said a car driven east on Route C by Nora Lee Young, 34, of Advance made a left turn into the path of a pickup driven west on Route C by Kent Stewart Corver, 22, of Poplar Bluff.

The Young woman was taken to Dexter Memorial Hospital, and Corver was taken to Lucy Lee Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

Five persons were injured in a single-vehicle accident at 12:55 a.m. today on Route AA two miles north of Piedmont in Wayne County.

The accident occurred when Stanley G. Shriver, 18, of Piedmont, who was traveling east at a high rate lost control of his car on a curve and the vehicle ran off the right side of the road and struck a tree.

Passengers who received moderate injuries were Daniel J. Carroll, 22, and Melissa C. Hunter, 17, of Piedmont and Patricia A. White, 17, of Williamsville. Larry E. Hicks, 22, and Brenda Kay Eaton, 16, of Piedmont received minor injuries. All of the injured were taken to Wayne County Medical Center in Piedmont, and the girls were transferred to Doctors Hospital in Poplar Bluff for observation.

Wholesale prices of consumer foods — basically the prices paid by supermarkets — declined four-tenths of a per cent following an increase in September and three consecutive months of decline in the summer.

Over the past 12 months, wholesale prices have risen 3.5 per cent, the smallest 12-month increase since November, 1971, when they rose 3.3 per cent during a period of government controls.

Industrial prices have risen 6.6 per cent over the past year while farm prices were 5.4 per cent lower and processed foods and feeds were down 6.1 per cent.

Smoke causes 7-vehicle crash

A Texas woman was injured in a seven-vehicle chain reaction accident and seven persons were injured in two other area traffic accidents Wednesday and early today, according to the highway patrol.

The seven- vehicle accident occurred at 2 p.m. Wednesday on Interstate 55 two miles north of New Madrid when a heavy layer of smoke caused by grass burning on the shoulder of the road blocked the vision of the drivers who were all southbound.

According to the patrol, one vehicle stopped in the middle of the road just over a low hillcrest. A van pulling a camping trailer driven by Harley G. Bradley, 75, of Rocky Ridge came over the hill and was able to stop without hitting the stopped vehicle, but a tractor- trailer truck driven by David E. Glidewell, 24, of Jonesboro, Ark., was unable to stop and struck the van and camping trailer from behind.

A chain reaction collision followed involving a car driven by Ester E. Nisbit, 65, of Arlington, Tex., a car pulling a trailer driven by William J. Kohler, 27, of Fargo, N.D., a pickup truck pulling a boat and trailer driven by Claude N. Curtsinger, 39, of Mayfield, Ky., and cars driven by Gilbert W. Johnson, 31, and Homer M. Rutherford, 72, both of Mount Vernon, Ill.

The Nisbit woman, who suffered moderate injuries, was taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital, then transferred to St. Francis Hospital in Cape Girardeau.

A car- pickup collision caused minor injuries to both drivers at 5:30 p.m. at the junction of Route C and Highway 91 at Advance in Stoddard County.

The patrol said a car driven east on Route C by Nora Lee Young, 34, of Advance made a left turn into the path of a pickup driven west on Route C by Kent Stewart Corver, 22, of Poplar Bluff.

The Young woman was taken to Dexter Memorial Hospital, and Corver was taken to Lucy Lee Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

Five persons were injured in a single-vehicle accident at 12:55 a.m. today on Route AA two miles north of Piedmont in Wayne County.

The accident occurred when Stanley G. Shriver, 18, of Piedmont, who was traveling east at a high rate lost control of his car on a curve and the vehicle ran off the right side of the road and struck a tree.

Passengers who received moderate injuries were Daniel J. Carroll, 22, and Melissa C. Hunter, 17, of Piedmont and Patricia A. White, 17, of Williamsville. Larry E. Hicks, 22, and Brenda Kay Eaton, 16, of Piedmont received minor injuries. All of the injured were taken to Wayne County Medical Center in Piedmont, and the girls were transferred to Doctors Hospital in Poplar Bluff for observation.

PEACE IN PALACIOS

What has Palacios, Tex., got other communities with populations of 4,000 don't have?

By-passing the great metropolitan centers of the world, the World Alliance of YMCAs has picked little Palacios, 100 miles southeast of Houston, as the site for its upcoming World Youth Peace Conference.

Close to 200 delegates from around the world, ranging in age from 18 to 30, are expected to participate in the conference scheduled for Nov. 7-14.

The conference will deal with such issues as human rights, disarmament, international programs and "the Christian response to third-world problems," says Fredrik Franklin, secretary- general of the Alliance, which is headquartered in Geneva, Switzerland, and is the co-ordinating body for YMCAs in 88 countries.

Speaking on behalf of the host country, Robert W. Harlan, executive director of the U.S. National Council of YMCAs, says that "in today's interdependent world, we see peace as the essential ingredient in the enormous task of upgrading the quality of life around the world. That is why the YMCA of the U.S.A. has set as one of its national goals to work with people of other lands to build international understanding and world peace. This conference provides us with an opportunity to work toward this goal."

But why Palacios, a smallmultiracial community on the Gulf of Mexico?

One reason, says Harlan, is the opportunity it will give international delegates to see a side of America they may know little about. Another, is the Texas-style enthusiasm of the townspeople of Palacios, who are going all-out to ensure the conference's success.

LATEST IN TIN HATS

For the third time in this century, America's fighting men are being equipped with new "tin hats," reports the National Geographic Society.

The first was in World War I when American Doughboys adopted the flat-brimmed steel helmets worn by British Tommies. World War II saw the emergence of the familiar GI helmet, which in addition to its primary purpose came in so handy for cooking and washing and emergency digging.

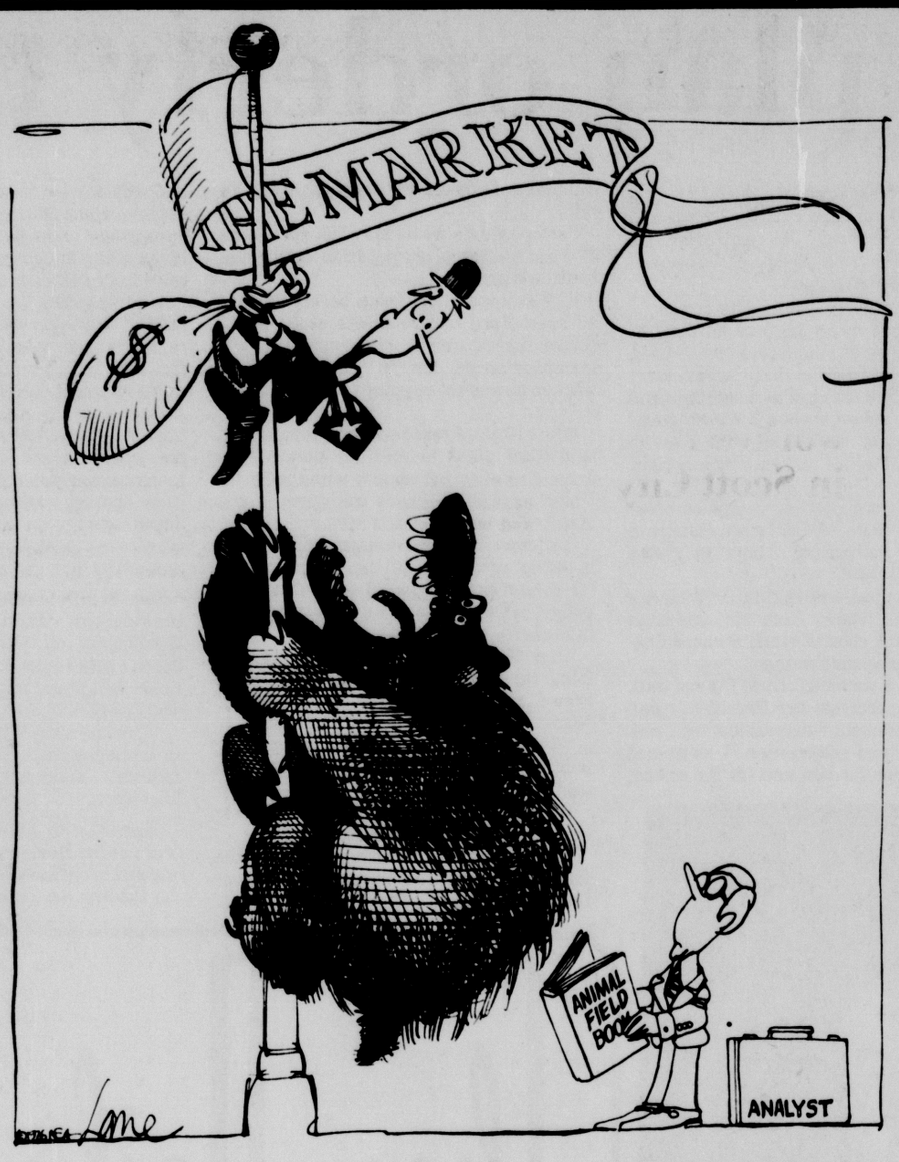

The new helmet isn't made of metal, however, but of a plastic that Army researchers say is lighter, stronger and more comfortable than any of its forerunners. In another departure from its one-size-fits- all predecessor, it will come in small, medium and large.

Also of interest is the fact that the new helmet bears a striking resemblance to the "coal scuttle" hats worn by Kaiser Bill's boys and Hitler's hordes, which the Germans have always maintained offered greater protection than the helmets used by their erstwhile opponents.

THE REAL CHALLENGE AND PROMISE OF SPACE

One does not have to be very old to remember when it was a minor miracle for a rocket to leave its launching pad successfully. So far have we come in two short decades that the technological feat of sending a complex array of instruments across hundreds of millions of miles of space to land on another planted is taken for granted.

But that is the way it has always been.

When Orville Wright soared 120 feet in 1903 in the first powered aircraft, that was a miracle. Today, the daily transoceanic flights of sleek jets transporting thousands of people is routine.

When Russia orbited the first artificial satellite in 1957, that was a miracle. Today, the launching of yet another communications or weather satellite scarcely rates notice in the newspapers. We can see the entire North American continent and its changing cloud patterns every night on television and think nothing of it. The fact that men have left their footprints on the moon is almost ancient history.

The discovery of one of the Viking probes of evidence of life on Mars would, no doubt, do much to shake the public out of the "apathy" of which some NASA scientists have complained. That would be another miracle.

But even then, proof that organic molecules or organic processes similar to those on earth are present on another planet would quickly come to be accepted. What would be significant about such a discovery would not be the discovery itself nor the impetus it would give to space exploration. It would be the subtle yet profound influence it would have over the long range on man's view of himself and his place in the universe, just as what was significant about the Wright biplane and Sputnik I were the new doors they opened for human adventure.

The odds are great, however, that we will never find life in this solar system— certainly not intelligent life, though few scientists can bring themselves to believe that out of all the billions upon billions of suspected planets in just our own galaxy, sentient, self-conscious life has arisen on only one.

It really doesn't matter. One thing we can be sure of is that there will one day be life outside the earth because men will take it there— slowly, hesitantly, but inevitably. There are worlds enough, and time. Space is, indeed, the "new ocean" of which John F. Kennedy spoke and we have fairly embarked upon it. There can be no turning back.

The next century will be the great age of colonization of earth's immediate vicinity and its nearer neighbors in space. First, permanently manned satellites in earth orbit; then a gigantic habitat suspended between earth and the moon; later the first human visitation to Mars and a permanent colony on the planet, along with exploration of all the planets.

Beyond that we enter the realm of science fiction: planetary engineering to remake the airless moon and barren Mars into more hospitable abodes for earth-originated life, and then on some distant day the sending of the first space ark bearing human seed on a generations- long voyage to another star system.

There are challenges enough to occupy the imaginations and energies of men for centuries to come, and how petty the conflicts and concerns of the 20th century will seem to those who will be engaged in meeting these challenges.

Therein, perhaps, lies the real promise of space— that in reaching out to the stars mankind will learn to see earth in its true cosmic perspective and achieve a better understanding of itself, and finally create that world of peace and love and happiness that has so long eluded it.

BOMBER IN HANDS OF NEXT PRESIDENT

In passing the $104 billion defense appropriations bill the U.S. Senate also approved an amendment postponing a decision on mass producing the controversial B- 1 bomber until after the next president is inaugurated.

Fate of the B- 1 remains uncertain, however. The House is on record in two recent votes for going ahead with production in November, as originally scheduled.

To say that the B- 1 is controversial is to put it mildly. Since the initial contract was signed in 1969- 70 with Rockwell International, the plane's designer, cost of the bomber has soared from around $32 million a copy to an estimated $88 million, reports Barron's financial weekly. Total cost of the program, including research and development, has jumped from about $10 billion six years ago to $23 billion today, and some critics say it could eventually cost $100 billion.

Not only that, but the plane as now blueprinted is less than the aircraft proposed in the late 1960s to replace the nation's aging fleet of B- 52s. It is slower (1.6 times the speed of sound versus twice the speed of sound in the original specifications), heavier by 30,000 pounds and thus more expensive to operate and with a shorter range, and operationally deficient.

In the three prototypes that have been built so far, at a cost of $1 billion each, it has been discovered that the plane's secondary power system for faster takeoffs is faulty, it suffers excessive buffeting and vibration at high speeds, its wing flaps and slats have failed to extend properly in all tests, its engine blades have cracked under high heat and access doors have occasionally popped off, among other problems.

These difficulties are not "mere kinks" that need to be ironed out but are faults in the integral features of the aircraft's design, says Barron's.

All this, plus doubts about the need for a new manned bomber in an age of strategic missiles, has led some critics to urge that the B- 1 be dropped forthwith so that the nation can cut its costs.

But even if the B- 1 program were to be scrapped today, it would cost taxpayers an additional $100 million in cancellation fees to Rockwell International.

No wonder Congress is thinking about dropping this hot potato in the lap of the next president.

GOVERNMENT INTRUSIONS IN ECONOMY SAID TO LIMIT FREEDOMS, EFFICIENCY

Too often the only thing accomplished by government's intervention in the economy is the invasion of individual freedoms, according to Cyclops Corp. Chairman William H. Knoell.

"The most important value that flows from a free economy is our individual freedom— our liberty," he declared recently, and listed some main areas in which government interference abridges that freedom.

The first is direct involvement, either through participation or regulation. "The railroads provide a classic example of control through regulation," he pointed out. "The agency set up to protect against abuses of monopoly ended up establishing a monopoly and then regulating most of it into bankruptcy."

The inefficiencies which result when the government can dictate rates and prices and control entry of competitors in the field "offend people in the pocketbook," he emphasized.

Another area of government intervention in the free market system is stimulating or pump priming of the economy to combat recession or maintain employment. The massive spending programs designed to achieve these goals "sap our independence" by increasing our taxes— "increasing the amount of time we devote, in effect, to working for government."

Mr. Knoell also pointed out that a major effect of government interference in the marketplace is a concentration of economic decision making, defeating "one of the natural beauties of the free marketplace" —dispersal of decision making. "Mistakes— errors in judgment— become catastrophes rather than the self- correcting problems they would have been when dispersed through the free economy."

The corporate executive concluded by urging every American to join in "a fight for freedom."

While stopping for lunch in a California town, my husband and I watched a meter maid do a brisk business in writing out parking tickets. Trailing her on foot was a blond youth who placed a small card beside each ticket.

As we left the restaurant, we couldn't resist peeking at one of the cards. "Maybe your watch was slow!" it suggested to the overtime parker— adding that now, perhaps, he or she knew the value of having the correct time. Then the local watch repairman generously offered to stand the cost of the parking ticket if the owner would bring the watch in for repair.

A case of perfect timing.

Don't forget. Remember the folks who forgot you last year.

WHERE THEY WENT WRONG

WASHINGTON— After every election the fickle media tend to interview the winners. No one seems to care about the losers. It has always been my policy to stay with the losers and find out why they blew it.

This year I talked to several of them.

The first was George Merchantile, an incumbent congressman who was defeated handily by Carter Crawfish in what many people said was an upset.

Merchantile told me, "I believe my biggest mistake was not communicating with the voters. Instead, I did most of my communicating with my press secretary, Lizzie Poivron, never suspecting that she would tape all our conversations at the Holiday Inn Motel. My opponent decided to use these private conversations against me which I consider despicable. I should have been suspicious when I kissed Lizzie on the ear and discovered a small microphone stuck in it. But when you're in the heat of a campaign you don't think about those things. Besides, I promised Lizzie no more and no less than I promised the voters. Most of what the public heard about the tapes was taken out of context. All they read was what I promised Lizzie, and not what I promised the country."

Archibald Blandanna, who lost his seat in Congress, was another bitter loser. "I would have won it if my opponent had played fair. But he made capital out of the fact that I had accepted a $50,000 gift in cash from the South Korean government. The truth is that I turned down the gift, so Tong Pong Long, a very dear friend of ours, gave it to my wife without my knowledge. I had warned my wife never to accept expensive gifts from a foreign government, but she maintains I never said anything about cash. Had she told me about it I would have made her return $20,000 of it immediately."

Robert Quovadis, who lost a close governor's race, was more philosophical than bitter. "We all make mistakes. I imagine mine was posing chained in the nude in Hustler magazine being whipped by three women wearing black boots. I thought at the time I could reach the blue-collar workers who do not necessarily read the newspapers, but apparently I was wrong. If the same picture had appeared in Family Circle I'm certain there wouldn't have been an uproar. I'm not saying that this photograph made me lose the election, but it put me on the defensive in the final weeks and no one was interested in what I had to ay about the new shcool bond issue I had proposed for the state."

Harlan Hathaway, who was running for attorney general of his state, blamed his defeat on his speech writers. "When Earl Butz resigned," Hathaway told me, "I hired the fellow who wrote jokes for him. I thought they were very funny and so did all the guys at the country club where I play golf.But when I started to tell them in ethnic neighborhoods the people just didn't laugh. So then I switched and came out for the death penalty. They didn't laugh at that either. I never saw so many uptight voters in my life as I did this year."

Probably one of the saddest losers was Floyd Harmony, who ran for the school board in Dutchess County.

Floyd put up $3 million of his own money, most of it for television commercials. "The trouble was I saturated the state with the commercials and everyone thought I was running for senator. I got one million votes for senator and only 30 for the school board. Mother is very angry with me because I used up the entire family's trust fund and she had to go down today to apply for food stamps."

Carlton Schmidlapp was the final loser I talked to. Schmidlapp feels he lost the election because he agreed to debate his opponent. He told me, "I gu gu guess y'y'y'you sh sh should never de de de de de bate your opp on on on onent if y'y'y'you have a st st st st st st stutter."

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Clergy, Students, Unionists Mass:

Labor unleashes Operation Sunbelt; boycott hits textiles, seeks millions new southern members

NEW YORK — At first it was California, here I come -- and grapes and lettuce were boycotted. Then deep in the heart of Texas Farah's chinos were hit. Now it's away down South in Dixie. And labor has actually launched its war against non-union towels, sheets, tablecloths, carpets -- the whole textile spread.

Only romantics will call it Operation Dixie. Realists will see the new Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers Union campaign for a place in the sun belt -- by smashing into the textile giant J. P. Stevens -- as the rebirth of American labor.

No "army" of union organizers is marching on the South to unionize J. P. Stevens' 44,000 employes. Instead, in scores of cities, cadres of men and women of the Catholic, Protestant and Jewish clergy will arise and thunder condemnation of the nation's second largest publicly owned textile firm.

Everywhere black leaders are expected to arise and follow the Southern-Christian Leadership Conference and Mrs. Coretta Scott King (Mrs. Martin Luther King Jr.).

Organizations which have dedicated themselves to what is known in socio-economic circles as social justice forces will take up the boycott banner. Squads of youngsters on scores of campuses will fall into line. Teams of lawyers studying federal statutes such as the Employe Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA) and bureaus such as the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) and Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) will microscope every possible Stevens violation -- if there are any.

There will be a national labor network concentrating on social action groups and consumer organizations.

This isn't the Operation Dixie of the olden CIO days. It's as different as were two testimonial dinners last week -- one banquet honoring the ancients, the 84-year-old former musicians' "Caesar" Jimmy Petrillo, the 82-year-old men's clothing workers union ex-president Jack Potofsky (successor to Sidney Hillman) and the 82-year-old meatcutters' chief executive officer Pat Gorman. A few days later, a few streets away, the younger labor dynamism honored the maritime chief seafarer Paul Hall.

On the latter dais were two men -- in effect the "new " Operation Sunbelt chiefs of staff -- the president of the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers Union (founded by the late Sidney Hillman), (54-year old Murray Finley. Finley is the first of the union's presidents to be American born, and in this century. And he's a lawyer. His pea-in-the-pod partner is the ebullient union general secretary-treasurer, 49-year-old Jack Sheinkman.

They may be the chiefs-of-staff of Operation Sunbelt. But the supreme command is on the AFL-CIO management floor, the all powerful "Eighth Floor" in the Washington headquarters. There the Southern campaign is being fully coordinated. As a national labor movement coordination. Not just the offering of help to a satellite-coordinated drive such as Cesar Chavez's. The entire labor movement is involved.

For America, this is a new era, the re-greening of the national labor movement.

There, in what can be called the Washington AFL-CIO headquarters' position room in Alan Kistler's Department of Organization and Field Services, the movement's forces are being maneuvered chess-like against J. P. Stevens and Co. This first assault is tactical. The strategy is to take Stevens and then move on to unionize the rest of the unorganized Southern textile workers -- about 1 million. And then to tie in with the new Southern drives of the huge steel and auto unions.

Under Meany and second-in-command Lane Kirkland, Kistler will coordinate such AFL departments as Leo Perlis's Community Services Department, the Civil Rights section -- the whole national apparatus.

Meanwhile, back her on New York's fabled Union Square, a 20-man staff has been in position -- awaiting only the end of the presidential campaign. Boycott chief is the politically agile and sophisticated ACTWU vice president Howard Samuel. Working with him on a full-time paid basis is a friend of Msgr. George Higgins (Chavez's spiritual mentor) -- Father Pat Sullivan. He will stir the clergy of his faith. There is also a full-time United Church of Christ minister on the payroll. And soon some clergyman from a Rabbinical council will be taken on. It is the Chavz pattern -- but indeed on a more far-flung front.

Moving into action now are Samuel's people in 27 metropolitan areas. Their assignment is to whip up tough boycott action against J.P. Stevens' main products. They're set all the way from San Diego to Seattle across to Chicago and New York and right in to the Deep South. In each community they will pressure state and municipal institutions, hotels, etc., to cut of their mass purchases from J.P. Stevens and Co.

This network, the clergy's contingent, the campus squads, the permanent staffers, will be living out of their suitcases -- for "two maybe three years," says Samuel, adding "they will certainly be traveling" the boycott trail.

Thus for the first time American labor is operating as a national movement -- as does the AFL-CIO's COPE, the Committee on Political Education. For George Meany, for many of the departments which rarely cooperate with each other on a national stretch, this is unique. They're now making history.

If J.P. Stevens falls so does the rest of the Sunbelt. With "textile" in the bag and if the steel and auto unions move in successfully, labor could be 30 million strong in a few years. Wage differentials, lower in the South, would equalize with the high rate North, new Southern labor leaders would rise, the old guard would fade to await old-timers' reunions such as that which pulled Jimmy Petrillo out of the shadows.

Yet, it may well be that millions of young, new sunbelt workers, white and black, will reject unionization. One can't predict. One can only say that the second war of the South has definitely begun.

FOREIGN COPS ON U.S. SOIL

By JACK ANDERSON and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — In past columns, we have exposed the close ties between the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) and some of the world's most notorious secret police. These foreign police, we charged, operate inside the United States with the full knowledge and cooperation of the CIA.

Intelligence sources tell us that the CIA has even condoned violations of U.S. laws by such police agencies as Chile's DINA and South Korea's KCIA. The CIA, in turn, is allowed to operate in their countries on the same basis.

For example, the Iranian secret police force, SAVAK, was actually organized and trained by the CIA. SAVAK's bag of tricks, like the CIA's, includes illegal break-ins, wiretaps and forgeries. SAVAK agents, like their CIA counterparts, also hide behind various "covers."

Most SAVAK agents in this country pretend to be diplomats. They operate under the direction of Mansur Rafizadeh, who claims to be an "attache" with Iran's United Nations mission.

Documents from SAVAK's own secret files, obtained by trusted sources and verified by other reliable sources, describe how its agents have the run of Iranian embassies and consulates around the world.

A secret memorandum to all Iran's ambassadors, signed by Foreign Minister Abbas Ali Khalatbari, instructs them to "treat (SAVAK agents) as you do other members of the consulate."

SAVAK operatives "should be allowed to attend all meetings which are regularly held," directs the foreign minister, "... so that they would be informed of the current affairs of the embassy."

On a recent occasion, a SAVAK agent in diplomatic disguise got carried away and granted an interview to a reporter. He received a secret reprimand from Tehran.

The secret message complained that he had given the reporter his "real name and submitted information which was not advisable to mention." Future interviews, declared the message, "should either be handled by the ambassador or the person in charge."

Only in an emergency, when a legitimate diplomat is unavailable, can SAVAK agents now speak to the press. But they must use "an assumed name" and make sure headquarters is "consulted beforehand."

The secret SAVAK papers indicate that the agents spend much of their time recruiting informants. One memorandum from Tehran warns SAVAK agents of the dangers of paying informants by checks, which can be traced too easily. This makes the "security of the operations and sources vulnerable," cautions the memo.

Therefore, the memo adds, it will be "necessary for operational leaders to make arrangements to travel to their respective territories ... in order to pay the sources' salaries and operations expenses in cash."

Most SAVAK informants, according to our sources, are used to infiltrate dissident student groups such as the World Confederation of Iranian Students (National Union). This is the group that occupied the Iranian embassy in Geneva last June and staged a noisy protest in Baltimore against the award of an honorary doctorate degree to the shah's sister by Johns Hopkins University.

No less than the shah, meanwhile, has acknowledged that SAVAK agents are "checking up on anybody who becomes affilaited with circles, organizations hostile to my country."

Lee Hamilton, D.-Ind., who heads a House investigations subcommittee, has assured our associate Joe Spear there will be a full congressional investigation of foreign intelligence operations in the United States. MAVERICK BATTLE: Deep inside the Pentagon, a bitter battle is raging between two of the Navy's most respected mavericks, Adm. Hyman Rickover and cost-cutter Gordon Rule.

Rule has urged the Navy to pay a huge claim to the giant Tenneco conglomerate for cost overrun claims on ships being built at the firm's Newport News shipyards. Rickover wants to pay Tenneco only what the contracts and substantiated claims call for.

In a classified memo to Navy officials, Rule belittled Rickover's attempts to make Tenneco stick to the original deal. At best, argued Rule, the Navy had a 25 per cent chance of beating Tenneco in the courts. In addition, he charged, on of Rickover's aides had "usurped negotiating authority" and the admiral was making "frenzied" efforts to cover it up.

Rickover promptly shot back a memo to Chief of Materials F.H. Michaelis charging Rule with committing a "gross injustice" against his aide. Rule, the admiral fumed, was using "unsupported allegations to justify the unwarranted payment of tens of millions of dollars of taxpayer funds" to Tenneco.

The firm, roared Rickover, has made "public attacks on the Navy ... threatened to stop work on Navy contracts and ... been highly critical of me and my staff and even lobbied against my most recent appointment."

As a result of the behind-the-scenes flap, Adm. Michaelis has issued orders stripping Rule of his authority as the contract supervisor on an important Tenneco claim.

PEACE IN PALACIOS

What has Palacios, Tex., got other communities with populations of 4,000 don't have?

By-passing the great metropolitan centers of the world, the World Alliance of YMCAs has picked little Palacios, 100 miles southeast of Houston, as the site for its upcoming World Youth Peace Conference.

Close to 200 delegates from around the world, ranging in age from 18 to 30, are expected to participate in the conference scheduled for Nov. 7-14.

The conference will deal with such issues as human rights, disarmament, international programs and "the Christian response to third-world problems," says Fredrik Franklin, secretary- general of the Alliance, which is headquartered in Geneva, Switzerland, and is the co-ordinating body for YMCAs in 88 countries.

Speaking on behalf of the host country, Robert W. Harlan, executive director of the U.S. National Council of YMCAs, says that "in today's interdependent world, we see peace as the essential ingredient in the enormous task of upgrading the quality of life around the world. That is why the YMCA of the U.S.A. has set as one of its national goals to work with people of other lands to build international understanding and world peace. This conference provides us with an opportunity to work toward this goal."

But why Palacios, a smallmultiracial community on the Gulf of Mexico?

One reason, says Harlan, is the opportunity it will give international delegates to see a side of America they may know little about. Another, is the Texas-style enthusiasm of the townspeople of Palacios, who are going all-out to ensure the conference's success.

LATEST IN TIN HATS

For the third time in this century, America's fighting men are being equipped with new "tin hats," reports the National Geographic Society.

The first was in World War I when American Doughboys adopted the flat-brimmed steel helmets worn by British Tommies. World War II saw the emergence of the familiar GI helmet, which in addition to its primary purpose came in so handy for cooking and washing and emergency digging.

The new helmet isn't made of metal, however, but of a plastic that Army researchers say is lighter, stronger and more comfortable than any of its forerunners. In another departure from its one-size-fits- all predecessor, it will come in small, medium and large.

Also of interest is the fact that the new helmet bears a striking resemblance to the "coal scuttle" hats worn by Kaiser Bill's boys and Hitler's hordes, which the Germans have always maintained offered greater protection than the helmets used by their erstwhile opponents.

THE REAL CHALLENGE AND PROMISE OF SPACE

One does not have to be very old to remember when it was a minor miracle for a rocket to leave its launching pad successfully. So far have we come in two short decades that the technological feat of sending a complex array of instruments across hundreds of millions of miles of space to land on another planted is taken for granted.

But that is the way it has always been.

When Orville Wright soared 120 feet in 1903 in the first powered aircraft, that was a miracle. Today, the daily transoceanic flights of sleek jets transporting thousands of people is routine.

When Russia orbited the first artificial satellite in 1957, that was a miracle. Today, the launching of yet another communications or weather satellite scarcely rates notice in the newspapers. We can see the entire North American continent and its changing cloud patterns every night on television and think nothing of it. The fact that men have left their footprints on the moon is almost ancient history.

The discovery of one of the Viking probes of evidence of life on Mars would, no doubt, do much to shake the public out of the "apathy" of which some NASA scientists have complained. That would be another miracle.

But even then, proof that organic molecules or organic processes similar to those on earth are present on another planet would quickly come to be accepted. What would be significant about such a discovery would not be the discovery itself nor the impetus it would give to space exploration. It would be the subtle yet profound influence it would have over the long range on man's view of himself and his place in the universe, just as what was significant about the Wright biplane and Sputnik I were the new doors they opened for human adventure.

The odds are great, however, that we will never find life in this solar system— certainly not intelligent life, though few scientists can bring themselves to believe that out of all the billions upon billions of suspected planets in just our own galaxy, sentient, self-conscious life has arisen on only one.

It really doesn't matter. One thing we can be sure of is that there will one day be life outside the earth because men will take it there— slowly, hesitantly, but inevitably. There are worlds enough, and time. Space is, indeed, the "new ocean" of which John F. Kennedy spoke and we have fairly embarked upon it. There can be no turning back.

The next century will be the great age of colonization of earth's immediate vicinity and its nearer neighbors in space. First, permanently manned satellites in earth orbit; then a gigantic habitat suspended between earth and the moon; later the first human visitation to Mars and a permanent colony on the planet, along with exploration of all the planets.

Beyond that we enter the realm of science fiction: planetary engineering to remake the airless moon and barren Mars into more hospitable abodes for earth-originated life, and then on some distant day the sending of the first space ark bearing human seed on a generations- long voyage to another star system.

There are challenges enough to occupy the imaginations and energies of men for centuries to come, and how petty the conflicts and concerns of the 20th century will seem to those who will be engaged in meeting these challenges.

Therein, perhaps, lies the real promise of space— that in reaching out to the stars mankind will learn to see earth in its true cosmic perspective and achieve a better understanding of itself, and finally create that world of peace and love and happiness that has so long eluded it.

BOMBER IN HANDS OF NEXT PRESIDENT

In passing the $104 billion defense appropriations bill the U.S. Senate also approved an amendment postponing a decision on mass producing the controversial B- 1 bomber until after the next president is inaugurated.

Fate of the B- 1 remains uncertain, however. The House is on record in two recent votes for going ahead with production in November, as originally scheduled.

To say that the B- 1 is controversial is to put it mildly. Since the initial contract was signed in 1969- 70 with Rockwell International, the plane's designer, cost of the bomber has soared from around $32 million a copy to an estimated $88 million, reports Barron's financial weekly. Total cost of the program, including research and development, has jumped from about $10 billion six years ago to $23 billion today, and some critics say it could eventually cost $100 billion.

Not only that, but the plane as now blueprinted is less than the aircraft proposed in the late 1960s to replace the nation's aging fleet of B- 52s. It is slower (1.6 times the speed of sound versus twice the speed of sound in the original specifications), heavier by 30,000 pounds and thus more expensive to operate and with a shorter range, and operationally deficient.

In the three prototypes that have been built so far, at a cost of $1 billion each, it has been discovered that the plane's secondary power system for faster takeoffs is faulty, it suffers excessive buffeting and vibration at high speeds, its wing flaps and slats have failed to extend properly in all tests, its engine blades have cracked under high heat and access doors have occasionally popped off, among other problems.

These difficulties are not "mere kinks" that need to be ironed out but are faults in the integral features of the aircraft's design, says Barron's.

All this, plus doubts about the need for a new manned bomber in an age of strategic missiles, has led some critics to urge that the B- 1 be dropped forthwith so that the nation can cut its costs.

But even if the B- 1 program were to be scrapped today, it would cost taxpayers an additional $100 million in cancellation fees to Rockwell International.

No wonder Congress is thinking about dropping this hot potato in the lap of the next president.

GOVERNMENT INTRUSIONS IN ECONOMY SAID TO LIMIT FREEDOMS, EFFICIENCY

Too often the only thing accomplished by government's intervention in the economy is the invasion of individual freedoms, according to Cyclops Corp. Chairman William H. Knoell.

"The most important value that flows from a free economy is our individual freedom— our liberty," he declared recently, and listed some main areas in which government interference abridges that freedom.

The first is direct involvement, either through participation or regulation. "The railroads provide a classic example of control through regulation," he pointed out. "The agency set up to protect against abuses of monopoly ended up establishing a monopoly and then regulating most of it into bankruptcy."

The inefficiencies which result when the government can dictate rates and prices and control entry of competitors in the field "offend people in the pocketbook," he emphasized.

Another area of government intervention in the free market system is stimulating or pump priming of the economy to combat recession or maintain employment. The massive spending programs designed to achieve these goals "sap our independence" by increasing our taxes— "increasing the amount of time we devote, in effect, to working for government."

Mr. Knoell also pointed out that a major effect of government interference in the marketplace is a concentration of economic decision making, defeating "one of the natural beauties of the free marketplace" —dispersal of decision making. "Mistakes— errors in judgment— become catastrophes rather than the self- correcting problems they would have been when dispersed through the free economy."

The corporate executive concluded by urging every American to join in "a fight for freedom."

While stopping for lunch in a California town, my husband and I watched a meter maid do a brisk business in writing out parking tickets. Trailing her on foot was a blond youth who placed a small card beside each ticket.

As we left the restaurant, we couldn't resist peeking at one of the cards. "Maybe your watch was slow!" it suggested to the overtime parker— adding that now, perhaps, he or she knew the value of having the correct time. Then the local watch repairman generously offered to stand the cost of the parking ticket if the owner would bring the watch in for repair.

A case of perfect timing.

WHERE THEY WENT WRONG

WASHINGTON— After every election the fickle media tend to interview the winners. No one seems to care about the losers. It has always been my policy to stay with the losers and find out why they blew it.

This year I talked to several of them.

The first was George Merchantile, an incumbent congressman who was defeated handily by Carter Crawfish in what many people said was an upset.

Merchantile told me, "I believe my biggest mistake was not communicating with the voters. Instead, I did most of my communicating with my press secretary, Lizzie Poivron, never suspecting that she would tape all our conversations at the Holiday Inn Motel. My opponent decided to use these private conversations against me which I consider despicable. I should have been suspicious when I kissed Lizzie on the ear and discovered a small microphone stuck in it. But when you're in the heat of a campaign you don't think about those things. Besides, I promised Lizzie no more and no less than I promised the voters. Most of what the public heard about the tapes was taken out of context. All they read was what I promised Lizzie, and not what I promised the country."

Archibald Blandanna, who lost his seat in Congress, was another bitter loser. "I would have won it if my opponent had played fair. But he made capital out of the fact that I had accepted a $50,000 gift in cash from the South Korean government. The truth is that I turned down the gift, so Tong Pong Long, a very dear friend of ours, gave it to my wife without my knowledge. I had warned my wife never to accept expensive gifts from a foreign government, but she maintains I never said anything about cash. Had she told me about it I would have made her return $20,000 of it immediately."

Robert Quovadis, who lost a close governor's race, was more philosophical than bitter. "We all make mistakes. I imagine mine was posing chained in the nude in Hustler magazine being whipped by three women wearing black boots. I thought at the time I could reach the blue-collar workers who do not necessarily read the newspapers, but apparently I was wrong. If the same picture had appeared in Family Circle I'm certain there wouldn't have been an uproar. I'm not saying that this photograph made me lose the election, but it put me on the defensive in the final weeks and no one was interested in what I had to ay about the new shcool bond issue I had proposed for the state."

Harlan Hathaway, who was running for attorney general of his state, blamed his defeat on his speech writers. "When Earl Butz resigned," Hathaway told me, "I hired the fellow who wrote jokes for him. I thought they were very funny and so did all the guys at the country club where I play golf.But when I started to tell them in ethnic neighborhoods the people just didn't laugh. So then I switched and came out for the death penalty. They didn't laugh at that either. I never saw so many uptight voters in my life as I did this year."

Probably one of the saddest losers was Floyd Harmony, who ran for the school board in Dutchess County.

Floyd put up $3 million of his own money, most of it for television commercials. "The trouble was I saturated the state with the commercials and everyone thought I was running for senator. I got one million votes for senator and only 30 for the school board. Mother is very angry with me because I used up the entire family's trust fund and she had to go down today to apply for food stamps."

Carlton Schmidlapp was the final loser I talked to. Schmidlapp feels he lost the election because he agreed to debate his opponent. He told me, "I gu gu guess y'y'y'you sh sh should never de de de de de bate your opp on on on onent if y'y'y'you have a st st st st st st stutter."

FOREIGN COPS ON U.S. SOIL

By JACK ANDERSON and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — In past columns, we have exposed the close ties between the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) and some of the world's most notorious secret police. These foreign police, we charged, operate inside the United States with the full knowledge and cooperation of the CIA.

Intelligence sources tell us that the CIA has even condoned violations of U.S. laws by such police agencies as Chile's DINA and South Korea's KCIA. The CIA, in turn, is allowed to operate in their countries on the same basis.

For example, the Iranian secret police force, SAVAK, was actually organized and trained by the CIA. SAVAK's bag of tricks, like the CIA's, includes illegal break-ins, wiretaps and forgeries. SAVAK agents, like their CIA counterparts, also hide behind various "covers."

Most SAVAK agents in this country pretend to be diplomats. They operate under the direction of Mansur Rafizadeh, who claims to be an "attache" with Iran's United Nations mission.

Documents from SAVAK's own secret files, obtained by trusted sources and verified by other reliable sources, describe how its agents have the run of Iranian embassies and consulates around the world.

A secret memorandum to all Iran's ambassadors, signed by Foreign Minister Abbas Ali Khalatbari, instructs them to "treat (SAVAK agents) as you do other members of the consulate."

SAVAK operatives "should be allowed to attend all meetings which are regularly held," directs the foreign minister, "... so that they would be informed of the current affairs of the embassy."

On a recent occasion, a SAVAK agent in diplomatic disguise got carried away and granted an interview to a reporter. He received a secret reprimand from Tehran.

The secret message complained that he had given the reporter his "real name and submitted information which was not advisable to mention." Future interviews, declared the message, "should either be handled by the ambassador or the person in charge."

Only in an emergency, when a legitimate diplomat is unavailable, can SAVAK agents now speak to the press. But they must use "an assumed name" and make sure headquarters is "consulted beforehand."

The secret SAVAK papers indicate that the agents spend much of their time recruiting informants. One memorandum from Tehran warns SAVAK agents of the dangers of paying informants by checks, which can be traced too easily. This makes the "security of the operations and sources vulnerable," cautions the memo.

Therefore, the memo adds, it will be "necessary for operational leaders to make arrangements to travel to their respective territories ... in order to pay the sources' salaries and operations expenses in cash."

Most SAVAK informants, according to our sources, are used to infiltrate dissident student groups such as the World Confederation of Iranian Students (National Union). This is the group that occupied the Iranian embassy in Geneva last June and staged a noisy protest in Baltimore against the award of an honorary doctorate degree to the shah's sister by Johns Hopkins University.

No less than the shah, meanwhile, has acknowledged that SAVAK agents are "checking up on anybody who becomes affilaited with circles, organizations hostile to my country."

Footnote: Rep. Lee Hamilton, D.-Ind., who heads a House investigations subcommittee, has assured our associate Joe Spear there will be a full congressional investigation of foreign intelligence operations in the United States. Rep. Donald Fraser, D.-Minn., has already asked the CIA about its arrangements with foreign intelligence agencies.

MAVERICK BATTLE: Deep inside the Pentagon, a bitter battle is raging between two of the Navy's most respected mavericks, Adm. Hyman Rickover and cost-cutter Gordon Rule.

Rule has urged the Navy to pay a huge claim to the giant Tenneco conglomerate for cost overrun claims on ships being built at the firm's Newport News shipyards. Rickover wants to pay Tenneco only what the contracts and substantiated claims call for.

In a classified memo to Navy officials, Rule belittled Rickover's attempts to make Tenneco stick to the original deal. At best, argued Rule, the Navy had a 25 per cent chance of beating Tenneco in the courts. In addition, he charged, on of Rickover's aides had "usurped negotiating authority" and the admiral was making "frenzied" efforts to cover it up.

Rickover promptly shot back a memo to Chief of Materials F.H. Michaelis charging Rule with committing a "gross injustice" against his aide. Rule, the admiral fumed, was using "unsupported allegations to justify the unwarranted payment of tens of millions of dollars of taxpayer funds" to Tenneco.

The firm, roared Rickover, has made "public attacks on the Navy ... threatened to stop work on Navy contracts and ... been highly critical of me and my staff and even lobbied against my most recent appointment."

As a result of the behind-the-scenes flap, Adm. Michaelis has issued orders stripping Rule of his authority as the contract supervisor on an important Tenneco claim.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Clergy, Students, Unionists Mass:

Labor unleashes Operation Sunbelt; boycott hits textiles, seeks millions new southern members

NEW YORK — At first it was California, here I come -- and grapes and lettuce were boycotted. Then deep in the heart of Texas Farah's chinos were hit. Now it's away down South in Dixie. And labor has actually launched its war against non-union towels, sheets, tablecloths, carpets -- the whole textile spread.

Only romantics will call it Operation Dixie. Realists will see the new Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers Union campaign for a place in the sun belt -- by smashing into the textile giant J. P. Stevens -- as the rebirth of American labor.

No "army" of union organizers is marching on the South to unionize J. P. Stevens' 44,000 employes. Instead, in scores of cities, cadres of men and women of the Catholic, Protestant and Jewish clergy will arise and thunder condemnation of the nation's second largest publicly owned textile firm.

Everywhere black leaders are expected to arise and follow the Southern-Christian Leadership Conference and Mrs. Coretta Scott King (Mrs. Martin Luther King Jr.).

Organizations which have dedicated themselves to what is known in socio-economic circles as social justice forces will take up the boycott banner. Squads of youngsters on scores of campuses will fall into line. Teams of lawyers studying federal statutes such as the Employe Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA) and bureaus such as the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) and Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) will microscope every possible Stevens violation -- if there are any.

There will be a national labor network concentrating on social action groups and consumer organizations.

This isn't the Operation Dixie of the olden CIO days. It's as different as were two testimonial dinners last week -- one banquet honoring the ancients, the 84-year-old former musicians' "Caesar" Jimmy Petrillo, the 82-year-old men's clothing workers union ex-president Jack Potofsky (successor to Sidney Hillman) and the 82-year-old meatcutters' chief executive officer Pat Gorman. A few days later, a few streets away, the younger labor dynamism honored the maritime chief seafarer Paul Hall.

On the latter dais were two men – in effect the "new " Operation Sunbelt chiefs of staff -- the president of the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers Union (founded by the late Sidney Hillman), (54-year old Murray Finley. Finley is the first of the union's presidents to be American born, and in this century. And he's a lawyer. His pea-in-the-pod partner is the ebullient union general secretary-treasurer, 49-year-old Jack Sheinkman.

They may be the chiefs-of-staff of Operation Sunbelt. But the supreme command is on the AFL-CIO management floor, the all powerful "Eighth Floor" in the Washington headquarters. There the Southern campaign is being fully coordinated. As a national labor movement coordination. Not just the offering of help to a satellite-coordinated drive such as Cesar Chavez's. The entire labor movement is involved.

For America, this is a new era, the re-greening of the national labor movement.

There, in what can be called the Washington AFL-CIO headquarters' position room in Alan Kistler's Department of Organization and Field Services, the movement's forces are being maneuvered chess-like against J. P. Stevens and Co. This first assault is tactical. The strategy is to take Stevens and then move on to unionize the rest of the unorganized Southern textile workers – about 1 million. And then to tie in with the new Southern drives of the huge steel and auto unions.

Under Meany and second-in-command Lane Kirkland, Kistler will coordinate such AFL departments as Leo Perlis's Community Services Department, the Civil Rights section -- the whole national apparatus.

Meanwhile, back her on New York's fabled Union Square, a 20-man staff has been in position -- awaiting only the end of the presidential campaign. Boycott chief is the politically agile and sophisticated ACTWU vice president Howard Samuel. Working with him on a full-time paid basis is a friend of Msgr. George Higgins (Chavez's spiritual mentor) -- Father Pat Sullivan. He will stir the clergy of his faith. There is also a full-time United Church of Christ minister on the payroll. And soon some clergyman from a Rabbinical council will be taken on. It is the Chavz pattern -- but indeed on a more far-flung front.

Moving into action now are Samuel's people in 27 metropolitan areas. Their assignment is to whip up tough boycott action against J.P. Stevens' main products. They're set all the way from San Diego to Seattle across to Chicago and New York and right in to the Deep South. In each community they will pressure state and municipal institutions, hotels, etc., to cut of their mass purchases from J.P. Stevens and Co.

This network, the clergy's contingent, the campus squads, the permanent staffers, will be living out of their suitcases -- for "two maybe three years," says Samuel, adding "they will certainly be traveling" the boycott trail.

Thus for the first time American labor is operating as a national movement -- as does the AFL-CIO's COPE, the Committee on Political Education. For George Meany, for many of the departments which rarely cooperate with each other on a national stretch, this is unique. They're now making history.

If J.P. Stevens falls so does the rest of the Sunbelt. With "textile" in the bag and if the steel and auto unions move in successfully, labor could be 30 million strong in a few years. Wage differentials, lower in the South, would equalize with the high rate North, new Southern labor leaders would rise, the old guard would fade to await old-timers' reunions such as that which pulled Jimmy Petrillo out of the shadows.

Yet, it may well be that millions of young, new sunbelt workers, white and black, will reject unionization. One can't predict. One can only say that the second war of the South has definitely begun.

New Madrid County vocational complex hosts conference

HOWARDVILLE— The New Madrid County R-1 Vocational School complex was recently the scene of a Southeast Area Regional Educational Conference. This conference is sponsored each year by the Missouri Department of Elementary and Secondary Education. Its purpose is to include lay people, teachers, administrators, board members and students in discussion of current topics.

Conclusions drawn from the conference are eventually relayed to the State Board of Education for input to the board's decision making. This year some 350 people from the southeast area attended.

The group was welcomed by the host superintendent Ray Melton. P.J. Newell, assistant commissioner, acting in the absence of State Commissioner of Education Arthur Mallory, outlined the general objectives for the meeting. After the general session, the group broke into smaller groups for discussion.

The purpose of the conference this year was to study and discuss a new "competency test" which is being developed for use in the public schools. The test, called the Basic Essential Skills Test (BEST), is designed to measure students' abilities in the basic skills. It became a reality this past summer after the State Board of Education directed the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education, which sponsors this conference, to develop a model of the examination.

Three general areas would be tested: reading-language arts, mathematics and government-economics. These skills are considered basic for continued learning, for success in any careeer and for everyday living in our changing environment.

A committee of curriculum specialists, businessmen, college officials, students and other interested Missourians assisted the staff members in constructing the test. State officials say that the BEST test has created a great deal of interest and has acquired some strong support.

Mallory says he doesn't think there will be much controversy about the test when people understand its goals and how it works.

Although the BEST test will be used to measure students' competency in the basic skills, the examination is primarily an instructional tool. As such, it will be part of the overall testing and assessment program now being put into practice in many Missouri schools.

The regional conference hosted by the New Madrid County R-1 Enlarged School District, was one of 11 conferences held throughout the state — the others being at Mountain Grove High School, Norborne High School, South County Technical School in St. Louis County, Truman High School at Independence, Mark Twin High School at Center, Washington Middle School at Maryville, Clinton High School, Webb City High School and Union High School. The final conference is scheduled Monday at California High School.

Speech contest deadline set

JEFFERSON CITY — The deadline for entering the Missouri Association of Fairs speech contest is Dec. 17.

The contest will be held Jan. 7, 1977, in Columbia, and is open to all students in the ninth through 12th grades.

The $500 cash scholarship is payable to the winning student upon proof of his entrance into college.

UN secretary general-love hate job

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — They all say it is an impossible job, a frustrating job, a back-breaking job. But once they get it, they don't want to give it up.

The job is secretary-general of the United Nations, and all the men who have held it seemed to have had a love-hate relationship with it.

The first, Trygve Lie of Norway, who was elected on Feb. 1, 1946, called the post "the most impossible job on this earth."

Yet he accepted a three-year extension of his five-year term and would have served beyond his seven years in office had not the Soviet Union in effect forced him out because of his stand against the North Korean invasion of South Korea.

The second, Dag Hammarskjold of Sweden, who was elected in April, 1952, wrote in his deeply religious private diary the day he was elected secretary-general:

"He who has surrendered himself to it knows that the way ends on the cross."

Hammarskjold, too, accepted a second five-year term and served 8½ years in all before he was killed in a plane crash on a peace mission in Africa.

His immediate successor, U Thant of Burma, spoke of the "heavy responsibilities" of the office. Still he served two terms totaling 10 years before he retired because of illness.

The fourth and current secretary-general, Kurt Waldheim of Austria, has called the job "the most strenuous I ever had" and sometimes the "most frustrating."

But now Waldheim says he would "regard it as a privilege and an honor" if he were re-elected to a second, five-year term to follow the one he will finish Dec. 31.

It looks as if he will be re-elected.

The secretary-general gets what it takes to live well — roughly $92,000 a year in salary and expenses and the use of a $1 million Manhattan town house.

But he scarcely has time to take advantage of the job benefits. He is too busy with the problems of a far-flung bureaucracy of upward of 10,000 international civil servants, and those of many of 145 member nations as well.

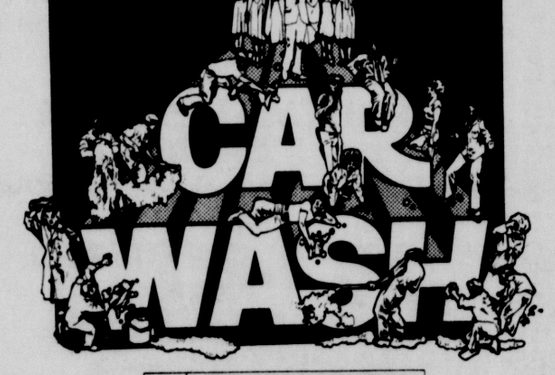

"There is no family life anymore," Waldheim said in an interview in his 38th floor office after some years on the job. "I have to be here from early in the morning until late in the evening ...

"But it's part of the job. I used to say when my wife was complaining about no family life, I said, 'You can't have the cake and eat it. You must accept the challenge.' And I always accepted the challenge. Otherwise I wouldn't have accepted this job.

"And this job is a job which only somebody can really do who is ready to accept the challenge, because it's sometimes a most frustrating job — most frustrating. You want to do so much more ..."

In 1905 Orville Wright made the first turn with an airplane (Sept. 15); five days later his brother Wilbur made the first complete circle.

New Madrid County vocational complex hosts conference

HOWARDVILLE— The New Madrid County R-1 Vocational School complex was recently the scene of a Southeast Area Regional Educational Conference. This conference is sponsored each year by the Missouri Department of Elementary and Secondary Education. Its purpose is to include lay people, teachers, administrators, board members and students in discussion of current topics.

Conclusions drawn from the conference are eventually relayed to the State Board of Education for input to the board's decision making. This year some 350 people from the southeast area attended.

The group was welcomed by the host superintendent Ray Melton. P.J. Newell, assistant commissioner, acting in the absence of State Commissioner of Education Arthur Mallory, outlined the general objectives for the meeting. After the general session, the group broke into smaller groups for discussion.

The purpose of the conference this year was to study and discuss a new "competency test" which is being developed for use in the public schools. The test, called the Basic Essential Skills Test (BEST), is designed to measure students' abilities in the basic skills. It became a reality this past summer after the State Board of Education directed the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education, which sponsors this conference, to develop a model of the examination.

Three general areas would be tested: reading-language arts, mathematics and government-economics. These skills are considered basic for continued learning, for success in any careeer and for everyday living in our changing environment.

A committee of curriculum specialists, businessmen, college officials, students and other interested Missourians assisted the staff members in constructing the test. State officials say that the BEST test has created a great deal of interest and has acquired some strong support.

Mallory says he doesn't think there will be much controversy about the test when people understand its goals and how it works.

Although the BEST test will be used to measure students' competency in the basic skills, the examination is primarily an instructional tool. As such, it will be part of the overall testing and assessment program now being put into practice in many Missouri schools.

The regional conference hosted by the New Madrid County R-1 Enlarged School District, was one of 11 conferences held throughout the state — the others being at Mountain Grove High School, Norborne High School, South County Technical School in St. Louis County, Truman High School at Independence, Mark Twin High School at Center, Washington Middle School at Maryville, Clinton High School, Webb City High School and Union High School. The final conference is scheduled Monday at California High School.

Dexter C of C will not give the city additional land

DEXTER— There was some confusion at the City Council meeting Monday night. Two weeks earlier the city had accepted a 50-foot easement from Paul Cox for a road that would run from One Mile to Harris drive, making a continuation of Market Street. It was the opinion of Mayor Willis Conner that the Chamber of Commerce would donate the additional land for the road.

Conner reported that the Chamber of Commerce has now turned the city down, saying, "The land is more valuable than the road." Conner apologized to the Board of Aldermen for the misunderstanding. The board voted to table a decision on whether to give the easement back to Cox until the second council meeting in December.

Some clarification also was needed for the city zoning laws. Conner was concerned about replacing mobile homes in certain areas.

Conner explained that some areas in Dexter were zoned not to allow mobile homes, but mobile homes already in these areas were allowed to remain. Now some residents want to replace the old mobile homes with new ones.

Ward Two Alderman Jack Smarr said the purpose of the zoning was to have trailers in an area and houses in the other. He said he felt the trailers should not be allowed to be replaced.

Ward One Alderman Eldon Cooper and Ward Two Alderman James Williams thought families should be able to "update their homes" with new mobile homes.

Smarr said the zoning committee would look into the matter.

Lions Club member Clarence Davidson attended the meeting wanting to know when a "trial" ramp would be put in on Stoddard Street for the wheelchair victims of the community.

"We'll see that it gets done," Conner said. Street Supt. Gene Hyten explained that he hadn't had time to start work on the ramp.

In other council business, Conner read two letters of praise for Fire Chief Al Banken. One was from the University of Missouri congratulating him on the success of the fire seminar held in Dexter. The other was a note of thanks from The Citizens Bank of Dexter. The bank had a fire Oct. 2 and noted that the fire department did a "quick and efficient" job.

Died with his boots off

Earp lies among the respectable

By Murray Olderman

COLMA, Calif. — (NEA) — The legend of Wyatt Earp doesn't jibe with the simple letters notched in the dark marble stone, which is tilted slightly off the ground and encased in concrete so that nobody'll steal it.

Underneath it lie the ashes of the notorious gunslinger of the Old West — in a Jewish cemetery on a hillside in the fog belt just south of San Francisco.

"Wyatt Earp
1848-1929
Josephine Earp
1861-1944"

Wyatt Earp, who along with his brothers Morgan and Virgil and consumptive Doc Holliday shot it out with the Clanton gang at the O.K. Corral (Oct. 26, 1881), should — to fit history — be buried in some place like Tombstone or Deadwood or Dodge City.

But here on this sunny Indian summer day — in the well-tended Hills of Eternity cemetery — you find out that Wyatt Earp lived to the ripe old age of 81 and died with his boots off, and that for the ages he reposes in the company of the Marcus family, his Jewish in-laws.

Maury Fitzgerald, a pipe-smoking English professor at the College of San Mateo, led this pilgrimage to the grave of Wyatt Berry Stapp Earp, who was a buffalo hunter, rode shotgun on a stage, was an assistant marshal and blasted and gambled his way through the silver and gold camps of Arizona, Colorado and Alaska before finding sedateness and respectability with Josephine Sarah Marcus, whom he married in 1897.

Earp died in Los Angeles.

He was cremated and the ashes later transferred to the Marcus family plot here. The headstone, weighing more than a quarter of a ton, was stolen a couple of times — and once found in some bushes off nearby Skyline Drive — before it was sealed in cement.

The curious still wander by. A history teacher from southern California happens along, with his teenaged sons, and snaps a picture with an Instamatic.

"We get a few every week," says Don Kuczynski, the caretaker, a refugee from Poland and the only Jew in Cemetery Workers Local 265.

Fitzgerald, who brought us here, has more than a pedantic interest in grave sites, too. He is executive secretary-treasurer of the union, which has 450 members stretched out from San Jose to Antioch. Maury has held the job for 17 years while dispensing syntax and grammar to junior college students.

He is the only union leader who lives in Hillsborough, a swank suburb where Bing Crosby is his near neighbor. But Maury's working domain is Colma, a unique community on the Peninsula ridge below San Francisco. Graves are its main business (there are no active cemeteries in the city). A hundred yards from Wyatt Earp's urn stands the crypt of William Randolph Hearst, the grandfather of Patty, the immensely influential newspaper tycoon who was the model for "Citizen Kane." He lies in adjoining Cypress Lawn Cemetery.

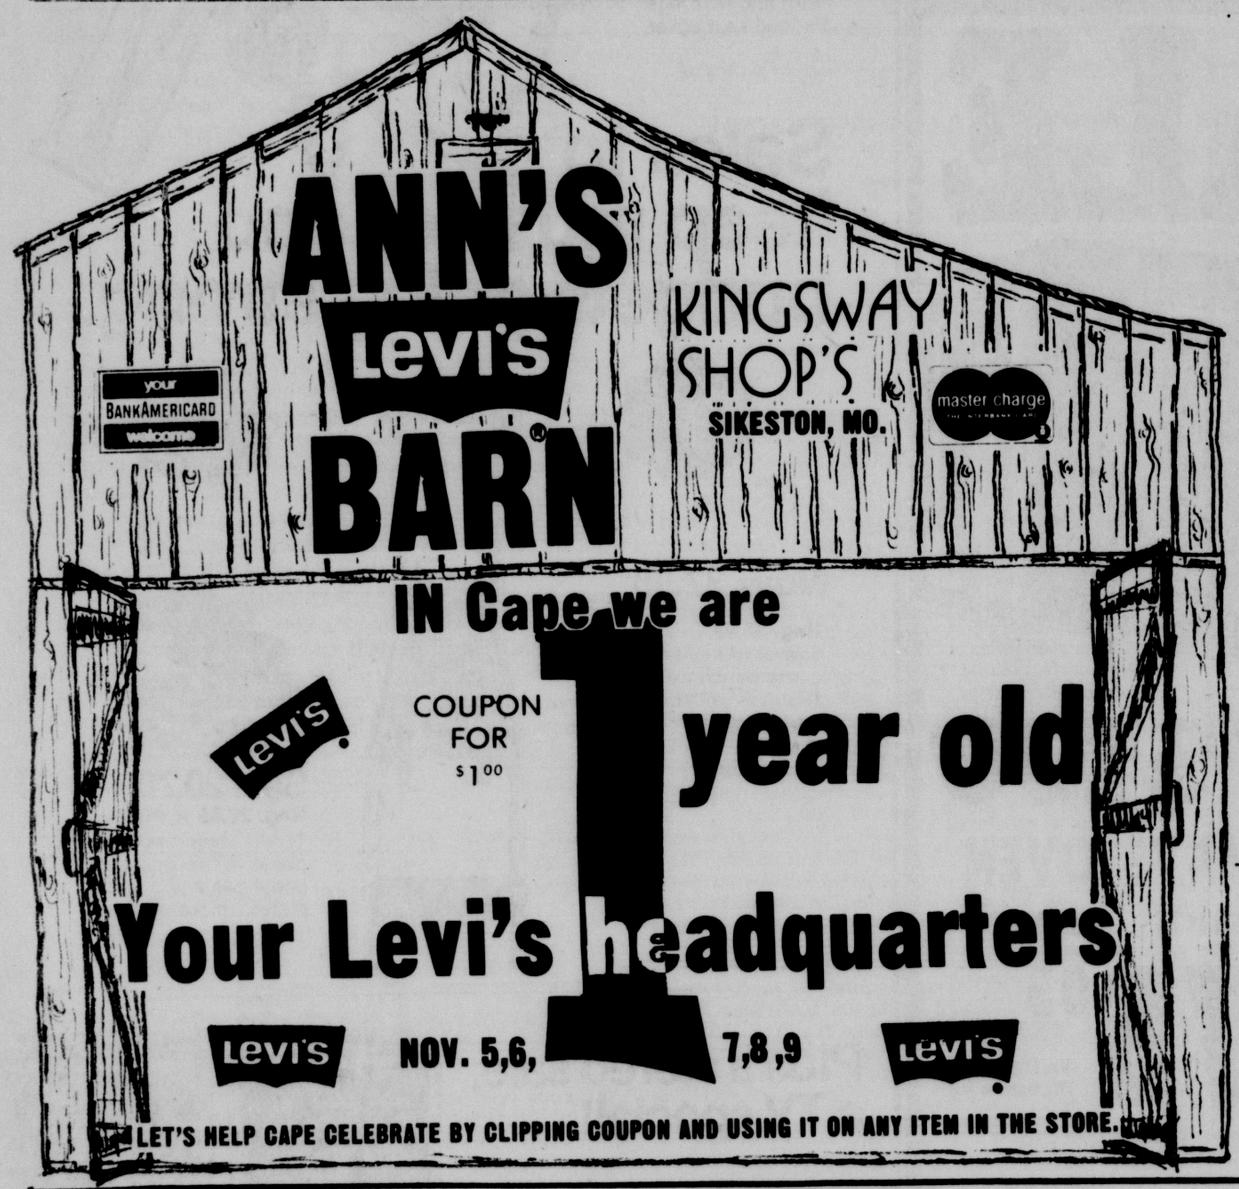

Altogether there are 12 cemeteries in Colma. Fitzgerald, a San Francisco native, picked up spare cash here — $2 a day — digging graves as a 15-year-old high school kid.

"Grave digging isn't what it used to be," he admits. "Forty per cent of our business is now in cremation — except for the orthodox Jewish, Greek and Catholic cemeteries."

Those huge ornate headstones that have traditionally cluttered cemeteries are now out, too. Modest marble monuments with simple lines and simple designations are the fashion.

So Wyatt Earp in his final resting place, noted by a plain marker, fits right in with his neighbors. Little did they realize they'd achieve immortality of a sort by reposing near the man who won the Gunfight at the O.K. Corral.

Zoning, street receives little action

DEXTER— The City Council discussed problems of zoning street construction and drainage, Monday night, then delayed action.

According to Mayor Willis Conner, Dexter will not soon build a through street on property near Harris Drive and Arvin Road as it proproposed in the past. Although Paul Cox, Route three has granted the city easements rights on part of the property, the city cannot acquire rights to the rest of the proposed street.

The Chamber of Commerce owns the remainder of the land, Conner said, and considers the property too valuable to turn into a street.

The council, therefore, voted to dalay action on the question until a December meeting. Then it will decide whether to continue efforts to construct the lane or return the easements rights to Cox.

Another question —whether new zoning ordinances prohibit replacement of pre-ordinance structures -- was referred to the zoning commission by the Council.

James Carney, city building inspector, objected when a new mobile home replaced an old one on the property of D. I. Webb, 29, Poplar St. Conner said Carney considers the replacement "updating," a violation of a city ordinance prohibiting new mobile homes in town.

Webb, however, argues that replacements do not come under the ordinance since the old mobile home was there prior to the law's enactment.

The city believes the ordinance's intent is to "phase out" mobile homes in Dexter. The council, citing the ordinance's vagueness, asked the zoning commission to study and clarify the law.

Land and street drainage problems were brought before the Council by Bill Autrey. His property is low-lying and will not drain properly and he wondered if the city would object if he built a levee to keep water from his land. If he built it, he said, the adjoining streets might be submerged.

The council reserved its opinion until the street and water superintendents could investigate.

The Lions Club and Disabled American Veterans are still interested in getting sidewalk and step ramps built in Dexter. Representing those organizations, Clarence Davidson asked the council why work on the ramps had not begun. Gene Hyten, street superintendent, spoke for the city, saying construction would begin as soon as he could get to it.

Dexter C of C will not give the city additional land

DEXTER— There was some confusion at the City Council meeting Monday night. Two weeks earlier the city had accepted a 50-foot easement from Paul Cox for a road that would run from One Mile to Harris drive, making a continuation of Market Street. It was the opinion of Mayor Willis Conner that the Chamber of Commerce would donate the additional land for the road.

Conner reported that the Chamber of Commerce has now turned the city down, saying, "The land is more valuable than the road." Conner apologized to the Board of Aldermen for the misunderstanding. The board voted to table a decision on whether to give the easement back to Cox until the second council meeting in December.

Some clarification also was needed for the city zoning laws. Conner was concerned about replacing mobile homes in certain areas.

Conner explained that some areas in Dexter were zoned not to allow mobile homes, but mobile homes already in these areas were allowed to remain. Now some residents want to replace the old mobile homes with new ones.

Ward Two Alderman Jack Smarr said the purpose of the zoning was to have trailers in an area and houses in the other. He said he felt the trailers should not be allowed to be replaced.

Ward One Alderman Eldon Cooper and Ward Two Alderman James Williams thought families should be able to "update their homes" with new mobile homes.

Smarr said the zoning committee would look into the matter.

Lions Club member Clarence Davidson attended the meeting wanting to know when a "trial" ramp would be put in on Stoddard Street for the wheelchair victims of the community.

"We'll see that it gets done," Conner said. Street Supt. Gene Hyten explained that he hadn't had time to start work on the ramp.

In other council business, Conner read two letters of praise for Fire Chief Al Banken. One was from the University of Missouri congratulating him on the success of the fire seminar held in Dexter. The other was a note of thanks from The Citizens Bank of Dexter. The bank had a fire Oct. 2 and noted that the fire department did a "quick and efficient" job.

Died with his boots off

Earp lies among the respectable

By Murray Olderman

COLMA, Calif. — (NEA) — The legend of Wyatt Earp doesn't jibe with the simple letters notched in the dark marble stone, which is tilted slightly off the ground and encased in concrete so that nobody'll steal it.

Underneath it lie the ashes of the notorious gunslinger of the Old West — in a Jewish cemetery on a hillside in the fog belt just south of San Francisco.

"Wyatt Earp
1848-1929
Josephine Earp
1861-1944"

Wyatt Earp, who along with his brothers Morgan and Virgil and consumptive Doc Holliday shot it out with the Clanton gang at the O.K. Corral (Oct. 26, 1881), should — to fit history — be buried in some place like Tombstone or Deadwood or Dodge City.

But here on this sunny Indian summer day — in the well-tended Hills of Eternity cemetery — you find out that Wyatt Earp lived to the ripe old age of 81 and died with his boots off, and that for the ages he reposes in the company of the Marcus family, his Jewish in-laws.

Maury Fitzgerald, a pipe-smoking English professor at the College of San Mateo, led this pilgrimage to the grave of Wyatt Berry Stapp Earp, who was a buffalo hunter, rode shotgun on a stage, was an assistant marshal and blasted and gambled his way through the silver and gold camps of Arizona, Colorado and Alaska before finding sedateness and respectability with Josephine Sarah Marcus, whom he married in 1897.

Earp died in Los Angeles. He was cremated and the ashes later transferred to the Marcus family plot here. The headstone, weighing more than a quarter of a ton, was stolen a couple of times — and once found in some bushes off nearby Skyline Drive — before it was sealed in cement.

The curious still wander by. A history teacher from southern California happens along, with his teenaged sons, and snaps a picture with an Instamatic.

"We get a few every week," says Don Kuczynski, the caretaker, a refugee from Poland and the only Jew in Cemetery Workers Local 265.

Fitzgerald, who brought us here, has more than a pedantic interest in grave sites, too. He is executive secretary-treasurer of the union, which has 450 members stretched out from San Jose to Antioch. Maury has held the job for 17 years while dispensing syntax and grammar to junior college students.

He is the only union leader who lives in Hillsborough, a swank suburb where Bing Crosby is his near neighbor. But Maury's working domain is Colma, a unique community on the Peninsula ridge below San Francisco. Graves are its main business (there are no active cemeteries in the city). A hundred yards from Wyatt Earp's urn stands the crypt of William Randolph Hearst, the grandfather of Patty, the immensely influential newspaper tycoon who was the model for "Citizen Kane." He lies in adjoining Cypress Lawn Cemetery.

Altogether there are 12 cemeteries in Colma. Fitzgerald, a San Francisco native, picked up spare cash here — $2 a day — digging graves as a 15-year-old high school kid.

"Grave digging isn't what it used to be," he admits. "Forty per cent of our business is now in cremation — except for the orthodox Jewish, Greek and Catholic cemeteries."

Those huge ornate headstones that have traditionally cluttered cemeteries are now out, too. Modest marble monuments with simple lines and simple designations are the fashion.

So Wyatt Earp in his final resting place, noted by a plain marker, fits right in with his neighbors. Little did they realize they'd achieve immortality of a sort by reposing near the man who won the Gunfight at the O.K. Corral.

Zoning, street receives little action

DEXTER— The City Council discussed problems of zoning street construction and drainage, Monday night, then delayed action.

According to Mayor Willis Conner, Dexter will not soon build a through street on property near Harris Drive and Arvin Road as it proproposed in the past. Although Paul Cox, Route three has granted the city easements rights on part of the property, the city cannot acquire rights to the rest of the proposed street.

The Chamber of Commerce owns the remainder of the land, Conner said, and considers the property too valuable to turn into a street.

The council, therefore, voted to dalay action on the question until a December meeting. Then it will decide whether to continue efforts to construct the lane or return the easements rights to Cox.

Another question —whether new zoning ordinances prohibit replacement of pre-ordinance structures – was referred to the zoning commission by the Council.

James Carney, city building inspector, objected when a new mobile home replaced an old one on the property of D. I. Webb, 29, Poplar St. Conner said Carney considers the replacement "updating," a violation of a city ordinance prohibiting new mobile homes in town.

Webb, however, argues that replacements do not come under the ordinance since the old mobile home was there prior to the law's enactment.

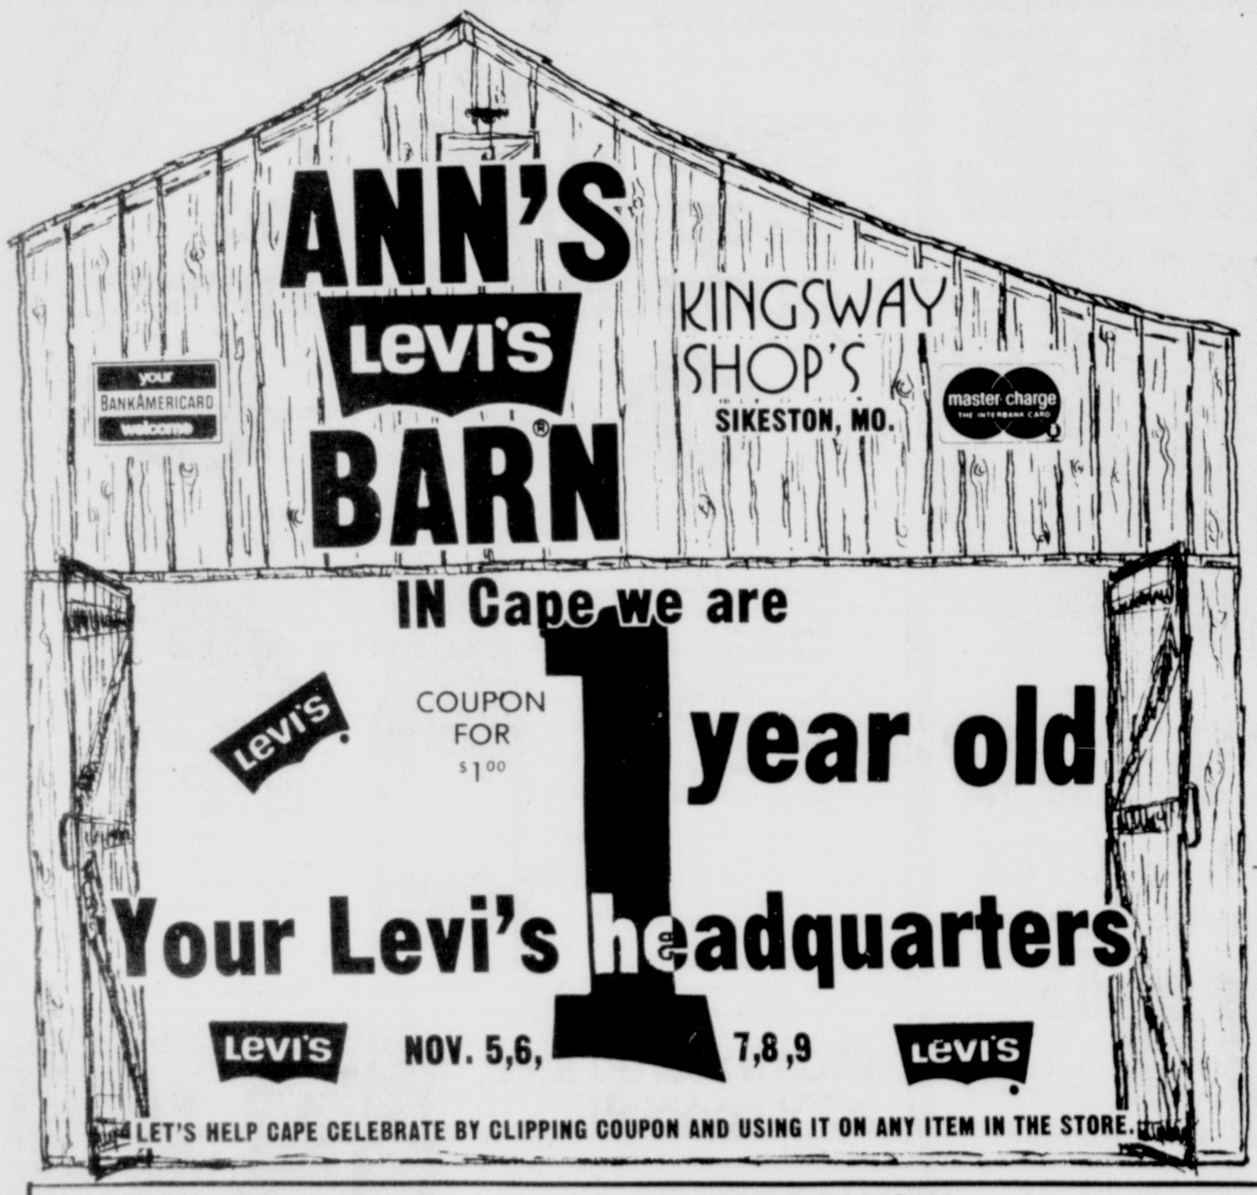

The city believes the ordinance's intent is to "phase out" mobile homes in Dexter. The council, citing the ordinance's vagueness, asked the zoning commission to study and clarify the law.

Land and street drainage problems were brought before the Council by Bill Autrey. His property is low-lying and will not drain properly and he wondered if the city would object if he built a levee to keep water from his land. If he built it, he said, the adjoining streets might be submerged.

The council reserved its opinion until the street and water superintendents could investigate.

The Lions Club and Disabled American Veterans are still interested in getting sidewalk and step ramps built in Dexter. Representing those organizations, Clarence Davidson asked the council why work on the ramps had not begun. Gene Hyten, street superintendent, spoke for the city, saying construction would begin as soon as he could get to it.

Stop the stimulation

I don't know about any other women, but I'm exhausted from reading novels that awaken me sexually and intellectually.

I want to shout, "Knock it off! I'm awake already."

As I nodded over a current novel the other night in bed, my husband nudged me and said, "What are you reading?"

I blinked myself awake. "It's a sensual discovery manual that says I am consumed with self-loathing and misdirected aggressions. Is there any popcorn left or did you eat it all?"

"Only the burnt ones are left. Doesn't that upset you? All that self-analysis?"

"Not really. I have to search for the woof and warp of my own existence."

"What does that mean?"

"I'm not sure, but I'm hungry all the time."

He picked up the book and for a couple of minutes was engrossed in it. Then he put it down and said, "This reminds me, did the part come in for my lawn sweeper."

"No, I have to check again Tuesday. Incidentally, are you reading anything I can take out of town with me next weekend?"

"What's wrong with this book?"

"Are you crazy? Do you want the entire plane to know I am being sexually and intellectually stimulated?"

"Where does it say that?"

"Right here on the cover alongside the fuzzy picture."

"Men don't read all this stuff. How come women do?"

"Because we used to read trashy novels and that was bad for us."

"What's the difference between a trash novel and this?"

"Two things. The dirty words are eight-letter and it's a book club alternate."

"How much longer are you going to read? That light is shining right into my eyes."

"Just as soon as I finish the chapter on fantasies."

"You fantasize?" he asked, sitting upright.

"All the time. I have this one recurring one. I am on a train in a compartment going into the city. Across from me is a good-looking stranger. We are both reading the same book, 'Don't Let the Warranty Run Out on Your Sex Life.' Finally, our eyes meet. He puts down his book, leans over and whispers, "Do you understand a word of this book?" and I reply coolly, "but of course."

Good night.

Rainbow installs girl

INDIANOLA, Iowa (AP) — Twelve-year-old Michelle Palmer has been installed as a member of the International Order of the Rainbow. But whether she and 5,000 other Iowa members still belong to the national service organization remains in doubt.

Michelle's admission caused national officials to expel Iowa's 136 Rainbow assemblies because of an "unwritten law" banning blacks, according to one state official of the Mason-affiliated group. Michelle's mother is black, her father white.

But national officials later said the assemblies were only suspended, not expelled. They blamed the situation on the Indianola chapter's failure to follow correct procedure in nominating Michelle for membership.

Dwaine Palmer said his daughter was installed "without incident" at a ceremony Wednesday. Reporters and photographers were barred from the installation at the Indianola Masonic Lodge, and police were called to keep them off the Masons' property.

Herbert Grout, supreme inspector of the Rainbow Girls in McAlester, Okla., was unavailable for comment on the installation.

"The kids would have gotten along great if the damn adults didn't get involved," said Palmer. "It's something the girls have never experienced before — the discrimination — and they're going to remember this.

"When she (Michelle) came to me and said she wanted to join, she was concerned about the dues and buying a white dress the girls wear."

Husband-wife workers cause fellow employes trouble

Dear Ann Landers: This letter is for all couples who met at work, fell in love, married, and continue to work together.

Please do yourselves a favor. One of you quit. I don't care which one, but for the sake of your marriage, the people who have to work with you, your boss, everybody, quit.

It's unhealthy for a couple to be together 24 hours a day. You can't help but get on each other's nerves. Remember the old saying, "Don't bring your work problems home." Well, the reverse is true: "Don't bring your home problems to work." It's easy to tell when you've had a fight. You continue it on the job and make everyone uncomfortable.

So please take this suggestion in the spirit intended. Quit -- one of you -- before both of you are replaced. -- In The Know

Dear In: Generally speaking, I agree with your admonition, but there are exceptions.

When the couple owns or runs the business there is less chance for the kind of trouble you describe. It's when they fight on somebody else's payroll that they run into problems.

Dear Ann Landers: I am concerned about the 18-year-old boy who felt guilty because he didn't shed a tear at his grandmother's funeral but when his cat died he couldn't stop crying.

You may have been right when you said it was because he was emotionally involved with his cat but not with his grandmother. Please consider another possibility.

Some people experience a delayed reaction to grief. They may feel the loss so deeply they are numbed into a state of shock. Or they keep their feeling penned in because they are afraid of going to pieces.

Later on, sometimes months after the event, they find release by overreacting to something of minor significance.

Please print this letter. The boy who wrote probably feels enough guilt without being told he didn't carte about his grandmother. No one has experienced everything and that's why I'm bold enough to differ with you. -- L.R.

Dear L.R.: You explanation is as good as mine. Either of us may be right. No one should feel guilty because he lacks emotional involvement with another human being. If there's no chemistry -- there's no chemistry. Respect, admiration and good will are noble, too.

Dear Ann Landers: I am 20 and in love with Rick, age 21. Last year I gave birth to a beautiful baby girl. Rick's mother didn't believe the baby was his. Naturally this created some hard feelings between her and me. She began to work on Rick and we started to argue a lot. Finally we agreed to stop seeing each other for a while and maybe get back together in a few months.

Two weeks ago, I learned from a mutual friend that Rick married someone else. (A girl his mother liked.)

I never asked him for support money and he never offered any. This baby IS Rick's and many people feel he has some responsibility to her. Is it too late? -- Jane

Dear Jane: You need a lawyer. If you can't afford one, look up Legal Aid in the directory. They do a wonderful job.

A no-nonsense approach to how to deal with life's most difficult and most rewarding arrangement. Ann Landers's booklet, "Marriage -- What to Expect," will prepare you for better or for worse. World Community Day to be noted Friday

World Community Day will be celebrated by Church Women United Friday at Wesley United Methodist Church, 600 Pine St. A coffee will begin at 9:30 a.m. Mayor Don Fulton will speak about the community beginning at 10 a.m. A worship service will follow his talk.

Since 1942 World Community Day has been sponsored by Church Women United to emphasize corporate action for justice and peace.

The 1976 theme, highlighting the Bicentennial, focuses on the need to understand the complexities that require new systems to build a world community of interdependence in which we can live "Into the Third Century – Unafraid." In approximately 2,000 local units of Church Women United, women will be reflecting on the meaning of the words freedom, liberty and justice as they relate to every U.S. citizen, and their significance in the lives of church women, united in their belief that all the earth's people should have the right to live in human dignity.

Nationwide offerings received on World Community Day, and the year-round sale of gift certificates, support the ongoing work of Intercontinental Mission, the channel for Church Women United to fund development projects which foster wholeness in the global community. The following are some concrete examples. Funds given through approved agencies will provide: self-built homes for marginal families in Jamaica; resources for poor and black inhabitants in the Mississippi Delta to organize themselves for welfare rights, consumer education and accountability from elected officials; a pilot project for rural women in Goa, India to identify problems and design solutions for the development of their community.

Throughout the year, but especially on World Community Day, church women purchase gift certificates to respond with material aid to human beings who are in need of immediate relief from the ravages of war, famine, poverty, and natural disasters. They also assist in rehabilitation and reconciliation progams in war-torn areas, provide seed money and training for self-help projects and give timely help "where most needed" in response to emerging opportunities.

Scouts present fashions

Senior Girl Scout Troop No. 38 of Sikeston, made up of 28 high school sophomores from Sikeston and Matthews, presented a holiday fashion show Tuesday night at the Sikeston High School cafetorium.

Eight stores participated in the show, with clothing and accessories ranging from formal evening wear and party clothes to casual pant styles. Several of the fashions were made of corduroy with fall colors such as red and brown the dominant colors.

The girls were escorted by Rick Davis, Lynn Mayfield, Chris Launius and Jeff Young.

Providing commentary on the fashions were Susie Beard, Judy Brock, Kim Haynes and Malonie Malone. Music for the show was furnished by Diane Ellison, Lisa Ahrt and Michelle Manning.

Fashion show coordinators were Judy Brock and Diane Ellison.

Several door prizes were presented to members of the audience. Ten local business establishments donated the door prizes.

Bran adds fiber and bananas and peanuts supply welcome nutrients.

1¼ cups flour
1 cup whole-bran cereal
3 tablespoons sugar
3 teaspoons baking powder
1-3rd cup chopped salted peanuts
1 egg
1 cup (2 very ripe) mashed bananas
¼ cup milk
¼ cup butter or margarine, melted

In a medium bowl stir together the flour, bran, sugar, baking powder and peanuts. In a small bowl beat egg slightly; beat in the bananas, milk and butter; add all at once to flour mixture. Stir just until dry ingredients are moistened — batter will be lumpy. Turn into buttered medium-size muffin-pan cups, filling them about 2-3rds full. Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean — about 20 minutes. Serve at once or reheat. Makes 12.

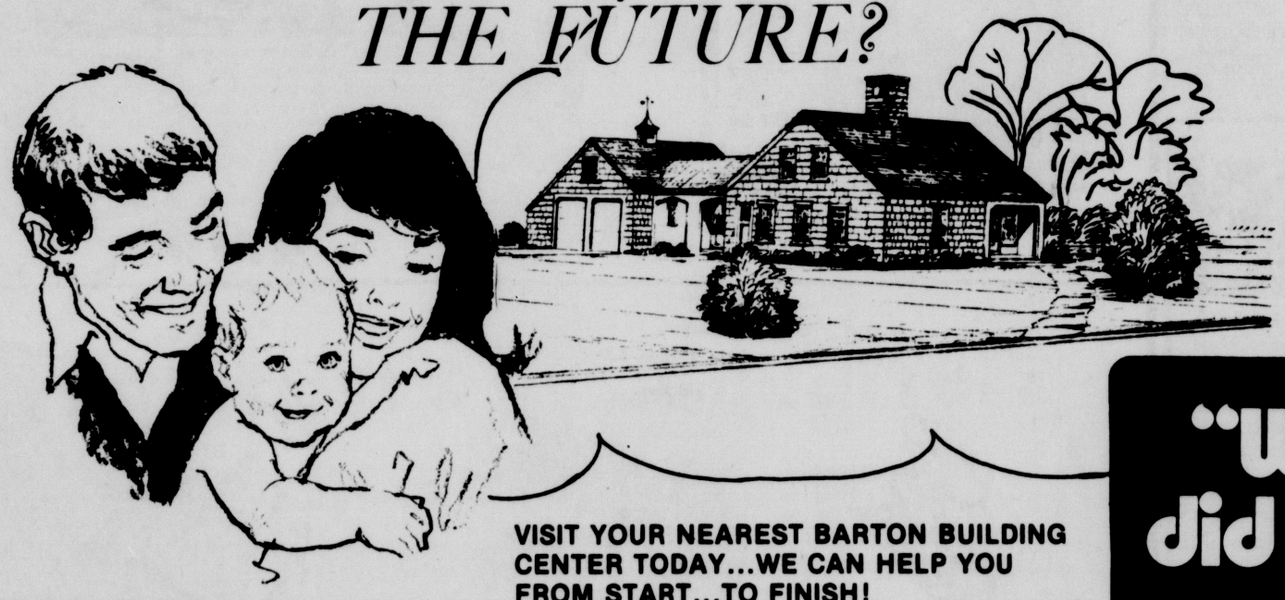

Declaration: Independent

More and more new voters are labeling themselves independents, The Conference Board notes. The share of new voters regarding themselves as independent rose form 26 percent in 1952, to 34 percent in 1960, to 50 percent in 1972. And since party identification habits are generally developed early, many of the younger independent voters could keep that label throughout their voting lives.

World Community Day to be noted Friday

World Community Day will be celebrated by Church Women United Friday at Wesley United Methodist Church, 600 Pine St. A coffee will begin at 9:30 a.m. Mayor Don Fulton will speak about the community beginning at 10 a.m. A worship service will follow his talk.

Since 1942 World Community Day has been sponsored by Church Women United to emphasize corporate action for justice and peace.

The 1976 theme, highlighting the Bicentennial, focuses on the need to understand the complexities that require new systems to build a world community of interdependence in which we can live "Into the Third Century -- Unafraid." In approximately 2,000 local units of Church Women United, women will be reflecting on the meaning of the words freedom, liberty and justice as they relate to every U.S. citizen, and their significance in the lives of church women, united in their belief that all the earth's people should have the right to live in human dignity.

Nationwide offerings received on World Community Day, and the year-round sale of gift certificates, support the ongoing work of Intercontinental Mission, the channel for Church Women United to fund development projects which foster wholeness in the global community. The following are some concrete examples. Funds given through approved agencies will provide: self-built homes for marginal families in Jamaica; resources for poor and black inhabitants in the Mississippi Delta to organize themselves for welfare rights, consumer education and accountability from elected officials; a pilot project for rural women in Goa, India to identify problems and design solutions for the development of their community.

Throughout the year, but especially on World Community Day, church women purchase gift certificates to respond with material aid to human beings who are in need of immediate relief from the ravages of war, famine, poverty, and natural disasters. They also assist in rehabilitation and reconciliation progams in war-torn areas, provide seed money and training for self-help projects and give timely help "where most needed" in response to emerging opportunities.

Tax cuts, tradeoffs of Ford, Carter

EDITORS: Following Business Mirror may be used spot if desired, and the column sent for today may be used Thursday.

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Late on election afternoon, one of President Ford's special assistants for economic matters was describing by telephone his concept of what a political campaign should accomplish.

"The best thing that can occur is to delineate the policy tradeoffs," he said. "The tradeoff between tax reduction and spending, between Ford and Carter."

Ford either failed to delineate the tradeoffs or he failed to convince enough people that his version of the balance between spending and taxing was the correct one for the times.

Ford clearly was for tax cuts. "The best tax reform is tax reduction," he said Oct. 4 when signing into law an $18 billion tax revision, one he said should have been $10 billion more. He said it often again.

But while tax cuts have indisputable popularity, many voters may have come to view the Ford approach to economics, symbolized by his stand on spending, with benign neglect of some of the big pocketbook issues of the day.

That much seems to be apparent in the vote of blue collar workers, who were exhorted by union leaders to vote for the Carter-Mondale ticket, "a clear choice," said the AFL-CIO "Federalist" magazine on its October cover.

Inside the publication were only four articles, and the subjects with which they dealt, and the manner in which they did so, told of the AFL-CIO's fury at President Ford.

"The '76 Elections: A chance for Progress," said the first. Beneath that title was a description of the article: "America is in desperate need for new leadership in 1976 to end the nation's drift and resume the progress that came to a halt after 1968."

"Congress: Victim of Ford's Vetoes," said the second. "President Gerald Ford's obstructionism and record number of vetoes subverted the efforts of the 94th Congress, which held out great promise after the 1974 elections."

The next: "The Economic Record — 1960-1976." The description: "Economic progress ground to a halt in the first years of the 1970s, with workers bearing a tremendous burden from the miumanagement of the Nixon-Ford Administration."

And finally this: "Unemployment — The Overriding Issues," an article that tells how "One of every five American workers was jobless at some time during 1975."

Ford's approach to economic stability was to move slowly, to permit market forces themselves to adjust the disparity between the number of workers and the jobs available, between prices paid and wages earned.

That same attitude prevailed for some time in the housing market, where until the administration moved to spur construction during the past two months, a low level of starts was considered a necessary if painful consequence of recovery.

Jimmy Carter was less positive about a tax cut, but he did hold out hope that government would become more active in seeking solutions to the egregious deficiencies of the economy.

Lilbourn unit schools plan open house Tuesday

LILBOURN — The Lilbourn Unit of the New Madrid County R-1 School System will host an open house Tuesday. Lilbourn High School and Lilbourn Elementary School will have their open house from 7 until 9 p.m., and Howardville Middle School and Marston Elementary School will be open from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

The faculty and administration encourage each parent to visit the schools on this night. All buildings of the Lilbourn Unit will be open.

Personal conferences between teacher and parents of each child enrolled in kindergarten, learning disabilities and first and second grades are also scheduled Tuesday. The conferences were initiated in 1974 as a replacement for the report card and other forms of written communication between parents and teachers.

Brick. The Saver

Today, saving energy is perhaps your number one design priority. Several thousand years ago, we came up with a rather earthly solution to energy conservation.

Brick walls are simply unmatched in their ability to reduce heating and cooling costs...drastically. In fact, an insulated brick wall is as much as 450% more efficient than a double plate glass wall in reducing heat loss. And as much as 75 times more efficient in reducing solar heat gain! A startling difference.

Furthermore, the same brick wall has a much lower initial cost than double plate glass. We think you'll find the answer to saving energy. And money.

Mumps can cause sterility

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 21 and my husband is 33. When my husband was 15 he caught the mumps and they went down in one testicle. We have been married for two years and have been trying desperately to conceive a baby and I have had no luck.

About a year ago my husband went to see his doctor about it and he told him this did not mean he was sterile (as we had thought). It just meant our chances of conceiving would be smaller and that all of our children would be of the same sex.

A year and half has passed and still I'm not able to get pregnant. I have a child by a previous marriage. What I'd really like to know is, what are our chances of having a baby?

DEAR READER — It is true that mumps that involve the testicles can cause a man to be sterile. However, many times the man recovers entirely and he is just as able as the next man to father children.

The involvement of only one testicle would suggest that the other one would be normal. In fact, as occurs with many paired organs the uninvolved one may enlarge to compensate for the weak one. We see this in people with one kidney, for example, the other kidney may be larger than normal.

There is absolutely nothing to the statement that all your children will be of the same sex. A man does not produce sperm for male children from one testicle and females from another. That is about as far-fetched as the city kid's idea that one teat of a cow is for chocolate milk, another for cream, another for buttermilk and the last for whole milk. I am sure you have misunderstood what the doctor said.

There is only one good way to find out what your chances of having a baby really are. Your husband should have a sperm count. If he has sufficient or even a borderline amount of healthy sperm cells the chances of your having a baby are pretty good. Sometimes improvement in overall medical conditions can improve a person's fertility — male or female. Men or women low in thyroid may benefit from thyroid medication. There is also some evidence now that men will benefit from taking the fertility pill often used in women who do not ovulate. This would probably be most applicable to the man with some but not enough healthy sperm cells. Apparently the fertility pills stimulate an increased production of sperm in the male just as they increase the production or release of ova from a woman's ovaries.

And to increase the sperm count somewhat, if there are healthy sperm, it is well to limit the attempts to get pregnant to every other night. When a doctor does a sperm count he wants a specimen after abstinence for two or three days. Why? To get the best specimen with the most healthy sperm cells. For pregnancy it is best to produce an equally optimal specimen. The sperm cells live for two to three days in the womb.

Finally, don't overlook the possibility that even though you have had one child that you may not be as fertile as you once were.

Impotence can be caused by diseases and hormone deficiencies but most often from psychological factors.

Damaged by firebomb

Workmen repair JFK birthplace for opening

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — From the horsehair plaster in the kitchen to the wallpaper in the bedroom, workmen ara putting the finishing touches on repairs at the birthplace of the late John F. Kennedy to get it ready to reopen to the public.

The restored home on Beals Street was damaged the night of Sept. 9, 1975, the day Boston's public schools opened for a second year of court-ordered busing. An arsonist's firebomb crashed through the kitchen door at the rear of the house.

Nov. 15 is the target date for the reopening of the two-story house as a historic site.

The physical restoration continued into October, according to John Heath, the National Park Service ranger overseeing the work. Then came the housecleaning.

The fire left the kitchen a charred ruin. The rest of the house, spared from flames by the quick response of firefighters, was damaged by heat and smoke.

The arsonist apparently also spray-painted the words "Bus Teddy" on a sidewalk in front of the house, in a reference to the late president's brother, U.S. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, a supporter of the busing program. Heath said chemicals were used to erase the slogan.

The president's parents — Rose and Joseph Kennedy — moved into the house in 1914. Four of their children, including the future president, were born there. The family moved to New York in 1921.

The house passed through about six owners before the Kennedy family bought it back in 1966 and deeded it to the federal government. The park service dedicated the site in 1969.

The kitchen furnishings, selected with Rose Kennedy's advice in order to recreate conditions when the family lived there, were not authentic pieces. Heath said none of the genuine Kennedy furnishings were lost in the fire.

All the articles of furniture had to be cleaned afterward, but the unfortunate incident gave officials the chance to assess the landmark fully.

"The fire gave us an opportunity to have a professional analysis of the home done," said Heath. "We went back to the original layers of paint to see exactly what kind was used."

The fire also revealed a china hutch in the wall between the kitchen and dining room. "No one even knew it was there. It must have been covered over years ago," said Heath.

"The original plaster in the kitchen was made with horsehair," said Heath of another post-fire discovery. "They don't make it that way nowadays. In order to replaster the kitchen, we had to go to Suffolk Downs racetrack to purchase horsehair, and then we had to find someone old enough to have worked with it."

A craftsman with experience in working horsehair plaster, which resists cracking with the settling of walls, was located in Boston and another historic detail was preserved.

Expanded evening news at NBC, ABC is dead

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The idea of an expanded evening news show is dead at NBC and ABC. But it still is kicking around at CBS, a top corporate official at that emporium says.

"We're not printing banners or campaigning, but it's still alive," says John A. Schneider, head of the CBS Broadcast Group, which runs the company's radio and TV networks and the CBS-owned stations.

He spoke by phone from New York this week shortly after ABC became the second of the three television networks to shelve the idea of lengthening its half-hour nightly newcasts to 45 minutes or an hour.

NBC shelved its plans on Oct. 21. NBC and ABC both cited near-unanimous affiliate opposition as the main reason for their actions.

Schneider, in saying the idea of a longer "CBS Evening News" still was under consideration, said no decision has been made on whether CBS actually will or won't adopt a longer format.

He said any decision depends on a number of things, and "what I'm doing is keeping my own counsel because with the other two (networks) already having committed themselves to something, it leaves me with all kinds of competitive latitude here."

Industry observers say most affiliates oppose longer nightly network news shows because such take time they want for their own local news and entertainment programs which can earn them great local advertising revenue.

Schneider says that view is correct, but too simplistic.

The question of advertising revenue, he says, could be handled simply by offering the affiliates all the commercial time available in the expanded part of a nightly network news show.

But to do a 45-minute or hour-long network news show, he added, one has to consider the Federal Communications Commission's prime-time access rule limiting what networks can air in the early evening.

For example, he said, the rule says "the only way you can go beyond 7 p.m. (EST) for a news broadcast is if it's preceded by a one-hour local newscast.

"Obviously, you aren't going to go 45 minutes or an hour (with a network news show) starting at 7 p.m."

You'd have to start earlier, which stations wouldn't like, he added, because it'd force a contraction in length or a shift in starting time of a local news show viewers expect at a certain hour each night.

CBS in September 1963 became the first network to expand its nightly news from 15 to 30 minutes. NBC did it later that month, with ABC delaying expansion until January 1967.

Broken Ballots

Citizens of Athens scratched their votes on pieces of broken pottery. Potsherd ballots cast more than 2,400 years ago have been unearthed by archeologists. Such ballots were known as ostraka, from which the word "Ostracize" is derived.

Tract Given to UMC For Ag. Research

A gift of a 104-acre tract of land near Clarkton has been accepted by the Board of Curators of the University of Missouri.

The donors were Roger F. Rhodes and Ella Frances Rhodes, southeast Missouri landowners. The farm, two miles north of Clarkton, will be named the Roger F. Rhodes Memorial Agricultural Research Farm.

The new research tract will be managed as a part of the Delta Center, near Portageville. Agricultural researchers consider the gift a valuable research tool since it is located in the Malden sand area, a soil type that is an important soil in the area. Most of the Delta tract is composed of gumbo and fine silt loam types of soil.

Lawmakers have reached the limit

By Ray Cromley

WASHINGTON — (NEA) As we head toward a new four-year term in the presidency and a new Congress, it becomes more clear each day how little the man in the White House and the Congress can do. Regardless of the philosophy of the men in power.

The president can propose. The Congress can vote laws. But recessions run their course. Competition forces prices down or it doesn't. Men and women look to the future with hope, start new businesses, invest or expand — or they don't.

If the president's pronouncements and the lawmakers' edicts suit the mood or the morality of the times, then men and women move slowly and painfully into a new era in race relations. But if the mood of the times is not identical with the new laws, the law fails, as with Prohibition. Men find loopholes, as in the payment of taxes — all quite legally — or in the evasion of the spirit of election laws.

The best a president and a Congress can do then is to sense the mood of the nation, and make laws to fit it that are consistent with their own ideals. When they're right, as were the men who developed the white — or yellow — stripes down the center of highways to prevent accidents, they hit the jackpot. Otherwise, as happened in the most recent period of price and wage controls, they so distort the picture, in this case the economic picture, that grave injuries are inflicted on many. Recovery becomes slow and painful.

There are observers who suggest, not wholly in jest, that it might be better for us all if Congress were to take a two-year holiday, give us time to digest and adjust somewhat to the mass of laws already on the books.

Already, there are so many laws, of such complication, it is impossible, I suspect, for any human being to go through a day without breaking several. I have heard a public official brag as much; he bet a group of average people he could catch any one of them breaking a law if they'd allow him to follow them around for an hour or so.

Visitors to our country, brought here under President Truman's Point Four program, came away with the thought that American industrial superiority lay not in superior equipment or in our inventiveness, or even in our abundance of resources, but rather that it came about because of something they could only define as the American spirit, the relationship of worker and boss, of worker and worker, and the goals set by each worker within himself.

These are not things set by presidential decrees or by congressional laws.

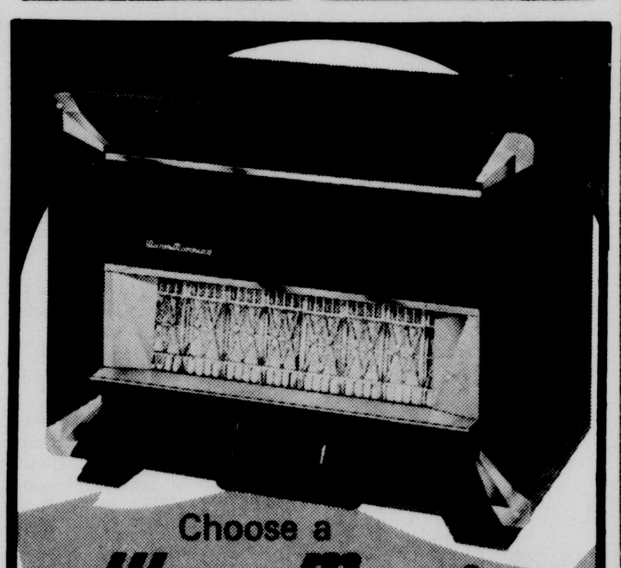

In fact, I suspect that the more government looks over our shoulder with laws which spell out what we must do down to the smallest details of daily life, the more of our funds it takes, the more it details how and what farmers and manufacturers shall produce, or creates laws which determine who shall work, the more it tends to destroy that spirit which is our glory and our salvation.

Certainly we need laws to protect the weak from the strong, to aid the sick and the helpless, to discourage crime, to assist education and promote the general welfare.

But there's a limit. And I, for one, believe that limit has been reached.

Tract Given to UMC For Ag. Research

A gift of a 104-acre tract of land near Clarkton has been accepted by the Board of Curators of the University of Missouri.

The donors were Roger F. Rhodes and Ella Frances Rhodes, southeast Missouri landowners. The farm, two miles north of Clarkton, will be named the Roger F. Rhodes Memorial Agricultural Research Farm.

The new research tract will be managed as a part of the Delta Center, near Portageville. Agricultural researchers consider the gift a valuable research tool since it is located in the Malden sand area, a soil type that is an important soil in the area. Most of the Delta tract is composed of gumbo and fine silt loam types of soil.

Lawmakers have reached the limit

By Ray Cromley

WASHINGTON — (NEA) As we head toward a new four-year term in the presidency and a new Congress, it becomes more clear each day how little the man in the White House and the Congress can do. Regardless of the philosophy of the men in power.

The president can propose. The Congress can vote laws. But recessions run their course. Competition forces prices down or it doesn't. Men and women look to the future with hope, start new businesses, invest or expand — or they don't.

If the president's pronouncements and the lawmakers' edicts suit the mood or the morality of the times, then men and women move slowly and painfully into a new era in race relations. But if the mood of the times is not identical with the new laws, the law fails, as with Prohibition. Men find loopholes, as in the payment of taxes — all quite legally — or in the evasion of the spirit of election laws.

The best a president and a Congress can do then is to sense the mood of the nation, and make laws to fit it that are consistent with their own ideals. When they're right, as were the men who developed the white — or yellow — stripes down the center of highways to prevent accidents, they hit the jackpot. Otherwise, as happened in the most recent period of price and wage controls, they so distort the picture, in this case the economic picture, that grave injuries are inflicted on many. Recovery becomes slow and painful.

There are observers who suggest, not wholly in jest, that it might be better for us all if Congress were to take a two-year holiday, give us time to digest and adjust somewhat to the mass of laws already on the books.

Already, there are so many laws, of such complication, it is impossible, I suspect, for any human being to go through a day without breaking several. I have heard a public official brag as much; he bet a group of average people he could catch any one of them breaking a law if they'd allow him to follow them around for an hour or so.

Visitors to our country, brought here under President Truman's Point Four program, came away with the thought that American industrial superiority lay not in superior equipment or in our inventiveness, or even in our abundance of resources, but rather that it came about because of something they could only define as the American spirit, the relationship of worker and boss, of worker and worker, and the goals set by each worker within himself.

These are not things set by presidential decrees or by congressional laws.

In fact, I suspect that the more government looks over our shoulder with laws which spell out what we must do down to the smallest details of daily life, the more of our funds it takes, the more it details how and what farmers and manufacturers shall produce, or creates laws which determine who shall work, the more it tends to destroy that spirit which is our glory and our salvation.

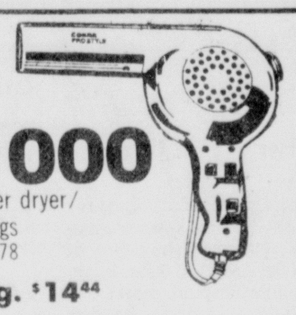

Certainly we need laws to protect the weak from the strong, to aid the sick and the helpless, to discourage crime, to assist education and promote the general welfare.

But there's a limit. And I, for one, believe that limit has been reached.

Sifford is elected as alderman

ADVANCE — In a special city election Tuesday, Roy Sifford was elected to fill an unexpired term for alderman in ward two, a position which had been held by Lloyd Wilfong, who resigned in August.

Sifford faced no opposition and received 46 votes. The results of the election were certified by the City Council Wednesday night.

In other business at the Wednesday night meeting, it was announced that a public hearing will be held Nov. 22 to discuss a new sewage treatment plant.

Hawaii's vote may have been major factor

WASHINGTON (AP) — Neither President Ford nor President-elect Jimmy Carter bothered to campaign in Hawaii. But as it turned out, their battle was close enough so that a few thousand votes in the islands might have given the election to Ford.

As the returns continued trickling in Wednesday, Carter held a substantial margin in the national popular vote, 40,276,040 to 38,532,630. In percentages, Carter had 51 to Ford's 48. But in the electoral college, it was much closer.

Carter's victories in 22 states, including Hawaii, won him 272 electoral votes, two more than the 270 needed for an absolute majority.

His margin of victory in Hawaii was 7,300 votes. If Hawaii's four electoral votes had swung to Ford, Carter would have been stopped two short of a majority. The nation would now be agonizing over the contents of some absentee ballots in Oregon and Ohio.

Oregon and Ohio are so close that no winners have been declared as of early today. In Oregon, Ford leads Carter for the six electoral votes by 485,305 to 484,643, or a margin of 662 votes. The final results may be known by the end of the week, when absentee ballots are tallied.

Ohio's 25 electoral votes are leaning toward Carter. He has 1,999,481 popular votes to 1,991,881 for Ford. But those results could change in the final canvass, which will not be held for two weeks.

Although the elections were equally close in other states, many states count their absentee ballots before the election, so the final results are known sooner.

Ford counted several fingernail victories in his list of 26 states and 235 electoral votes. He won by 130,000 votes out of 7.5 million cast in California; by 13,000 of 1.25 million cast in Iowa; by 3,000 of 460,000 cast in Maine; by 57,000 of 2.9 million cast in New Jersey; by 5,000 of 300,000 cast in South Dakota.

Some of Carter's close victories, aside from Hawaii, were in Wisconsin, 34,000 out of 2 million cast; and Mississippi, 12,000 of 735,000 cast.

The election turnout was either high or low, depending on the statistics used. About 79.4 million voted, the highest figure ever. In 1972, the turnout was 77.6 million; in 1968 it was 73 million; and in 1964, it was 70 million.

As a percentage of the voting age population, however, the turnout was low, continuing a decline that began in 1964.

Only about 53 per cent of the voting age populaion went to the polls, compared with the record high 62.8 per cent which voted in 1960. The figure dropped to 55 per cent by 1972.

Correction

MATTHEWS — Gene Curtis received 144 votes to win the police judge post Tuesday in the special city election, not Robert Carlisle as incorrectly reported in Wednesday's edition of The Daily Standard.

Missouri Attorney General John Danforth and his wife Sally smile and wave to crowd at his Jefferson City headquarters Tuesday night after he had been declared winner in the race for U.S. Senator. Danforth defeated former governor Warren Hearnes.

Ford's future uncertain

WASHINGTON (AP) — For Jerry Ford, like Jimmy Carter, it is a time for readjustment.

But, while Carter and his aides begin a transitional period to set up the Democrat's White House tenure, the plans of the man who will move out of the Oval Office in January remain uncertain, according to his spokesman.

President Ford is planning to take a week-long vacation in Palm Springs, Calif., and will probably leave Washington on Sunday, according to his press secretary, Ron Nessen.

Ford conceded defeat at 11:04 a.m. EST Wednesday in a telephone call to Carter in Plains and also sent a telegram to the Democrat, pledging cooperation in the transition period.

Ford's hoarse throat prevented him from carrying on much of a conversation, Nessen said, so White House chief of staff Richard Cheney, on an extension telephone, read the text of the telegram to the former Georgia governor, now president-elect.

The talk, the press secretary said, was "warm and friendly."

Then, just after noon, the President and his family appeared in the White House press room where Ford, his vocce hoarse from campaigning, turned over the microphone to his wife, whom he described as "the real spokesman for the family."

Mrs. Ford, teary-eyed, read a statement saying Ford "wants to thank all those thousands of people who worked so hard on his behalf.... The President urges all Americans to join him in giving your united support to President-elect Carter as he prepares to assume his new responsibilities."

Then she read the "Dear Jimmy" telegram.

"'It is apparent now that you have won our long and intense struggle for the presidency. I congratulate you on your victory ...,'" she read. "'Although there will continue to be disagreements over the best means to use in pursuing our goals, I want to assure you that you will have my complete and whole-hearted support as you take the oath of office this January.'"

The Fords' daughter, Susan, and three sons stood in the background alongside the President as Mrs. Ford read the statement. Susan appeared to be fighting back tears.

Ford, said Nessen, was "certainly disappointed" by the election results, but he quoted one aide who said the President seemed "to feel a lot better than we do."

He said the President "seemed to give strength to his family and members of the staff who were affected by this."

Until the inauguration on Jan. 20, 1977, Ford, according to Nessen, will focus on such projects as the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks, the Middle East and efforts to control spending and inflation.

Nessen noted Ford has the responsibility to present a fiscal 1978 budget and economic reports that go to a new Congress in January.

What does the President plan to do after Jan. 20? Nessen was asked.

"I don't think he's really focused on precisely what he's going to do," the press secretary said. "I've heard him talk about an interest in teaching political science at a university."

Democrats withstand GOP attempt on legislative hold

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Democrats withstood Republican attempts to break their two-thirds hold on both Houses of the legislature, and even improved the Democratic majority in the Senate.

With returns in from all legislative districts but four in the House, Democrats picked up an additional seat in the Senate and suffered on a net loss of three seats in the House, where they had five members more than a two-thirds majority.

All but two incumbents facing opposition in their re-election bids survived Tuesday's balloting, and while those two house Republicans were defeated, Republicans in other House districts managed to secure enough formerly Democratic seats to offset the loss.

In the Senate, Columbia attorney Warren Welliver defeated Columbia businessman Jerry Epple, the Republican, to recapture that mid-Missouri seat being vacated by retiring Republican Larry Marshall.

That victory with other seats retained by the party now holding them will boost the Democratic majority in the upper chamber next January from 23-11 to 24-10, one more than two-thirds.

Falling to Democratic challengers in the House were seven-term Republican Harold Dickson of California, who was defeated by Van E. Donley of Boonville, and freshman Republican Gail Novinger of Kirksville, who lost to Harry Hill of Novinger.

The switching of House seats between parties resulting in the GOP's net gain of three will reduce the Democratic majority next January from 114-49 to 111-52.

That total is based on incomplete returns in the other four legislative districts which show the parties now holding those seats will retain them.

The number of women lawmakers will also increase when the new General Assembly convenes in January. There will be two women instead of one in the Senate and 14 instead of 12 women in the House.

The defeats of Dickson and Novinger coupled with retirements and incumbent defeats in the primary also means that freshman lawmakers will make up more than a fourth of both houses in the new legislature.

The House will have at least 42 new faces among its 163 members while 10 of the 34 senators will be newcomers.

The Senate will also have another two new members because of special elections that will be held to fill upcoming vacancies.

Democratic Sens. Robert A. Young of St. Ann and Ike Skelton of Lexington were successful in their bids for Congress on Tuesday and elections must now be held to pick successors to complete the final two years of terms.

Televised debates aided Carter more than Ford

NEW YORK (AP) — The televised debates between Gerald Ford and Jimmy Carter benefited Carter more than the President, apparently by giving the voters a better idea where he stands on major issues.

But an Associated Press survey of voters on election day found the debates dispelled only part of the voteru' confusion on Carter's position on abortion and did not wipe out concerns about his fuzziness on issues.

The debates exerted less influence on Ford voters, but they also apparently helped expand supporters' knowledge about his stands on issues.

The AP survey was conducted on Nov. 2 at 100 scientifically selected precincts across the country, ranging from several in New York City to those in remote rural areas. In a unique cooperative effort, reporters from AP member newspapers and broadcast stations joined AP staffers and stringers to do the interviewing.

Asked how much influence the debate had on their decision who to vote for, 44 per cent of the Carter supporters said the portions of the debates they watched had a "great deal" or "some" influence on their decision.

By contrast, only 36 per cent of the Ford voters said the debates they watched had swayed their decision to that degree.

Over-all, agreement with the candidate on the issues was the reason cited most by all the voters in their decision who to vote for. And the poll found that they knew far more about the candidates when they voted than they had in May.

Each of the 2,487 voters interviewed by the AP survey was asked where the candidate they voted for stood on four major issues — government-guaranteed jobs, an antiabortion amendment, more money for national defense and national health insurance.

On all four issues, more supporters of each man named his position correctly than named it incorrectly.

The margins were as large as the 70 per cent to 18 per cent edge by which Carter voters said he supports comprehensive national health insurance and the 70 per cent to 23 per cent bulge by which Ford backers said he opposes the federal government guaranteeing jobs for all those who want them.

When broken down into those who watched the debates and those who did not, Carter voters who watched the debates were from five to nine points more likely to name his position correctly than those who did not watch the debates.

Ford backers who watched the debates were even more well versed — naming the President's position correctly more often by a 9-to 13-point margin over thse who did not.

These findings do not prove the debates were the source of the information on the candidates. For one thing, those who watched the debates tended to be the better educated voters, who are expected to have a better idea of candidates' positions. But education cannot account for all of the variation found by the survey, leaving the debates as a major factor.

But the survey also found that Carter is still viewed as fuzzy on the issues.

About one out of five of his own supporters agreed that "it's hard to know where he stands on the issues" and 35 per cent more said there was no difference between Carter and Ford on that trait.

Abortion was the only issue on which Carter voters were generally confused, with about half saying they didn't know where he stood or crediting him with an incorrect position.

Voters okay purchase of land, increase sales tax

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A program to purchase more than 370 square miles for conservation purposes has been approved by Missouri voters, as they gave approval to a one-eighth per cent increase in the state sales tax.

Another measure concerning utility rates was also approved at the polls, but an exemption for food and drugs from the sales tax was defeated.

With 98 per cent of the state precincts reporting, the conservation measure had received 883,714 favorable votes or 51 per cent, while those in oppositionto it collected 848,365 or 51 per cent.

The unitlity proposal was overwhelmingly approved. It prevents electric companies from charging customers for the financing long range, expensive power plants, until those plants provide service.

With 98 per cent of the precincts tabulated, 62 per cent of the votes were favorable and 38 per cent were against. Food and drugs sales exemption was lost by a 56-44 per cent margin.

With 98 per cent of the state's vote counted, opponents collected 945,789 votes compared to 728,772 in favor.

Supporters of the sales tax exemption said it would result in a more equitable form of taxation, but opponents said the state would find it difficult to make up the expected loss of $140 million if it were approved.

The utility proposition was the most complex of the three issues, which were brought to voters' attention through initiative petition drives.

Sifford is elected as alderman

ADVANCE — In a special city election Tuesday, Roy Sifford was elected to fill an unexpired term for alderman in ward two, a position which had been held by Lloyd Wilfong, who resigned in August.

Sifford faced no opposition and received 46 votes. The results of the election were certified by the City Council Wednesday night.

In other business at the Wednesday night meeting, it was announced that a public hearing will be held Nov. 22 to discuss a new sewage treatment plant.

Hawaii's vote may have been major factor

WASHINGTON (AP) — Neither President Ford nor President-elect Jimmy Carter bothered to campaign in Hawaii. But as it turned out, their battle was close enough so that a few thousand votes in the islands might have given the election to Ford.

As the returns continued trickling in Wednesday, Carter held a substantial margin in the national popular vote, 40,276,040 to 38,532,630. In percentages, Carter had 51 to Ford's 48. But in the electoral college, it was much closer.

Carter's victories in 22 states, including Hawaii, won him 272 electoral votes, two more than the 270 needed for an absolute majority.

His margin of victory in Hawaii was 7,300 votes. If Hawaii's four electoral votes had swung to Ford, Carter would have been stopped two short of a majority. The nation would now be agonizing over the contents of some absentee ballots in Oregon and Ohio.

Oregon and Ohio are so close that no winners have been declared as of early today. In Oregon, Ford leads Carter for the six electoral votes by 485,305 to 484,643, or a margin of 662 votes. The final results may be known by the end of the week, when absentee ballots are tallied.

Ohio's 25 electoral votes are leaning toward Carter. He has 1,999,481 popular votes to 1,991,881 for Ford. But those results could change in the final canvass, which will not be held for two weeks.

Although the elections were equally close in other states, many states count their absentee ballots before the election, so the final results are known sooner.

Ford counted several fingernail victories in his list of 26 states and 235 electoral votes. He won by 130,000 votes out of 7.5 million cast in California; by 13,000 of 1.25 million cast in Iowa; by 3,000 of 460,000 cast in Maine; by 57,000 of 2.9 million cast in New Jersey; by 5,000 of 300,000 cast in South Dakota.

Some of Carter's close victories, aside from Hawaii, were in Wisconsin, 34,000 out of 2 million cast; and Mississippi, 12,000 of 735,000 cast.

The election turnout was either high or low, depending on the statistics used. About 79.4 million voted, the highest figure ever. In 1972, the turnout was 77.6 million; in 1968 it was 73 million; and in 1964, it was 70 million.

As a percentage of the voting age population, however, the turnout was low, continuing a decline that began in 1964.

Only about 53 per cent of the voting age populaion went to the polls, compared with the record high 62.8 per cent which voted in 1960. The figure dropped to 55 per cent by 1972.

Ford's future uncertain

WASHINGTON (AP) — For Jerry Ford, like Jimmy Carter, it is a time for readjustment.

But, while Carter and his aides begin a transitional period to set up the Democrat's White House tenure, the plans of the man who will move out of the Oval Office in January remain uncertain, according to his spokesman.

President Ford is planning to take a week-long vacation in Palm Springs, Calif., and will probably leave Washington on Sunday, according to his press secretary, Ron Nessen.

Ford conceded defeat at 11:04 a.m. EST Wednesday in a telephone call to Carter in Plains and also sent a telegram to the Democrat, pledging cooperation in the transition period.

Ford's hoarse throat prevented him from carrying on much of a conversation, Nessen said, so White House chief of staff Richard Cheney, on an extension telephone, read the text of the telegram to the former Georgia governor, now president-elect.

The talk, the press secretary said, was "warm and friendly."

Then, just after noon, the President and his family appeared in the White House press room where Ford, his vocce hoarse from campaigning, turned over the microphone to his wife, whom he described as "the real spokesman for the family."

Mrs. Ford, teary-eyed, read a statement saying Ford "wants to thank all those thousands of people who worked so hard on his behalf.... The President urges all Americans to join him in giving your united support to President-elect Carter as he prepares to assume his new responsibilities."

Then she read the "Dear Jimmy" telegram.

"'It is apparent now that you have won our long and intense struggle for the presidency. I congratulate you on your victory ...,'" she read. "'Although there will continue to be disagreements over the best means to use in pursuing our goals, I want to assure you that you will have my complete and whole-hearted support as you take the oath of office this January.'"

The Fords' daughter, Susan, and three sons stood in the background alongside the President as Mrs. Ford read the statement. Susan appeared to be fighting back tears.

Ford, said Nessen, was "certainly disappointed" by the election results, but he quoted one aide who said the President seemed "to feel a lot better than we do."

He said the President "seemed to give strength to his family and members of the staff who were affected by this."

Until the inauguration on Jan. 20, 1977, Ford, according to Nessen, will focus on such projects as the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks, the Middle East and efforts to control spending and inflation.

Nessen noted Ford has the responsibility to present a fiscal 1978 budget and economic reports that go to a new Congress in January.

What does the President plan to do after Jan. 20? Nessen was asked.

"I don't think he's really focused on precisely what he's going to do," the press secretary said. "I've heard him talk about an interest in teaching political science at a university."

Democrats withstand GOP attempt on legislative hold

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Democrats withstood Republican attempts to break their two-thirds hold on both Houses of the legislature, and even improved the Democratic majority in the Senate.

With returns in from all legislative districts but four in the House, Democrats picked up an additional seat in the Senate and suffered on a net loss of three seats in the House, where they had five members more than a two-thirds majority.

All but two incumbents facing opposition in their re-election bids survived Tuesday's balloting, and while those two house Republicans were defeated, Republicans in other House districts managed to secure enough formerly Democratic seats to offset the loss.

In the Senate, Columbia attorney Warren Welliver defeated Columbia businessman Jerry Epple, the Republican, to recapture that mid-Missouri seat being vacated by retiring Republican Larry Marshall.

That victory with other seats retained by the party now holding them will boost the Democratic majority in the upper chamber next January from 23-11 to 24-10, one more than two-thirds.

Falling to Democratic challengers in the House were seven-term Republican Harold Dickson of California, who was defeated by Van E. Donley of Boonville, and freshman Republican Gail Novinger of Kirksville, who lost to Harry Hill of Novinger.

The switching of House seats between parties resulting in the GOP's net gain of three will reduce the Democratic majority next January from 114-49 to 111-52.

That total is based on incomplete returns in the other four legislative districts which show the parties now holding those seats will retain them.

The number of women lawmakers will also increase when the new General Assembly convenes in January. There will be two women instead of one in the Senate and 14 instead of 12 women in the House.

The defeats of Dickson and Novinger coupled with retirements and incumbent defeats in the primary also means that freshman lawmakers will make up more than a fourth of both houses in the new legislature.

The House will have at least 42 new faces among its 163 members while 10 of the 34 senators will be newcomers.

The Senate will also have another two new members because of special elections that will be held to fill upcoming vacancies.

Democratic Sens. Robert A. Young of St. Ann and Ike Skelton of Lexington were successful in their bids for Congress on Tuesday and elections must now be held to pick successors to complete the final two years of terms.

Accident, fire crime figures are released

The number of fire, crime and accident reports made by the Department of Public Safety totaled 552 during October, according to figure released today by Public Safety Director Kenneth Francis, who said 173 arrests were made during the month.

Reports from the field operations division were: Auto accidents, 64; auto thefts, two; assaults, 14; burglaries, 21; burglary alarms, 54; disturbance calls, 82; forgery, 10; investigations, 189; thefts, 77; and vandalisms, 14.

Reports from the fire division were: house fires, five; outbuilding fires, one; vehicle fires, seven; grass and rubbish fires, four; false alarms, two; miscellaneous calls, one; and building inspections, five.

Televised debates aided Carter more than Ford

NEW YORK (AP) — The televised debates between Gerald Ford and Jimmy Carter benefited Carter more than the President, apparently by giving the voters a better idea where he stands on major issues.

But an Associated Press survey of voters on election day found the debates dispelled only part of the voteru' confusion on Carter's position on abortion and did not wipe out concerns about his fuzziness on issues.

The debates exerted less influence on Ford voters, but they also apparently helped expand supporters' knowledge about his stands on issues.

The AP survey was conducted on Nov. 2 at 100 scientifically selected precincts across the country, ranging from several in New York City to those in remote rural areas. In a unique cooperative effort, reporters from AP member newspapers and broadcast stations joined AP staffers and stringers to do the interviewing.

Asked how much influence the debate had on their decision who to vote for, 44 per cent of the Carter supporters said the portions of the debates they watched had a "great deal" or "some" influence on their decision.

By contrast, only 36 per cent of the Ford voters said the debates they watched had swayed their decision to that degree.

Over-all, agreement with the candidate on the issues was the reason cited most by all the voters in their decision who to vote for. And the poll found that they knew far more about the candidates when they voted than they had in May.

Each of the 2,487 voters interviewed by the AP survey was asked where the candidate they voted for stood on four major issues — government-guaranteed jobs, an antiabortion amendment, more money for national defense and national health insurance.

On all four issues, more supporters of each man named his position correctly than named it incorrectly.

The margins were as large as the 70 per cent to 18 per cent edge by which Carter voters said he supports comprehensive national health insurance and the 70 per cent to 23 per cent bulge by which Ford backers said he opposes the federal government guaranteeing jobs for all those who want them.

When broken down into those who watched the debates and those who did not, Carter voters who watched the debates were from five to nine points more likely to name his position correctly than those who did not watch the debates.

Ford backers who watched the debates were even more well versed — naming the President's position correctly more often by a 9-to 13-point margin over thse who did not.

These findings do not prove the debates were the source of the information on the candidates. For one thing, those who watched the debates tended to be the better educated voters, who are expected to have a better idea of candidates' positions. But education cannot account for all of the variation found by the survey, leaving the debates as a major factor.

But the survey also found that Carter is still viewed as fuzzy on the issues.

About one out of five of his own supporters agreed that "it's hard to know where he stands on the issues" and 35 per cent more said there was no difference between Carter and Ford on that trait.

Abortion was the only issue on which Carter voters were generally confused, with about half saying they didn't know where he stood or crediting him with an incorrect position.

Voters okay purchase of land, increase sales tax

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A program to purchase more than 370 square miles for conservation purposes has been approved by Missouri voters, as they gave approval to a one-eighth per cent increase in the state sales tax.

Another measure concerning utility rates was also approved at the polls, but an exemption for food and drugs from the sales tax was defeated.

With 98 per cent of the state precincts reporting, the conservation measure had received 883,714 favorable votes or 51 per cent, while those in oppositionto it collected 848,365 or 51 per cent.

The unitlity proposal was overwhelmingly approved. It prevents electric companies from charging customers for the financing long range, expensive power plants, until those plants provide service.

With 98 per cent of the precincts tabulated, 62 per cent of the votes were favorable and 38 per cent were against. Food and drugs sales exemption was lost by a 56-44 per cent margin.

With 98 per cent of the state's vote counted, opponents collected 945,789 votes compared to 728,772 in favor.

Supporters of the sales tax exemption said it would result in a more equitable form of taxation, but opponents said the state would find it difficult to make up the expected loss of $140 million if it were approved.

The utility proposition was the most complex of the three issues, which were brought to voters' attention through initiative petition drives.

OU president wants NCAA's probe to come out in the open

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — University of Oklahoma President Dr. Paul Sharp wired the National Collegiate Athletic Association Wednesday asking it to state whether or not it is formally investigating the OU football program.

In a telegram to Walter Byers, executive director of the NCAA, Dr. Sharp said: (The) "Oklahoma City Times reports today (Wednesday) that you have issued a prepared statement in which 'previous comments by officials at OU were branded inaccurate.'

"Please provide by returned telegram (collect) a copy of alleged prepared statement. Further by returned telegram (collect), please state in plain language whether or not the University of Oklahoma is under official investigation by NCAA as required by Section 3, official procedure governing the NCAA enforcement program, NCAA manual 1976-77."

Byers released a statement earlier Wednesday that said the NCAA is conducting a preliminary probe into allegations of ticket scalping by OU players.

He said Sharp called him on Oct. 25, the day the Oklahoma City Times first reported the NCAA was investigating the allegations.

"I advised him that allegations of noncompliance with NCAA requirements previously had been received by our office, that we were in the process of investigating them to determine the reliability of the sources of the allegations and the extent of supporting details for the charges and that results of those initial interviews would determine whether there was cause for the formal notification procedures of the NCAA enforcement program," Byers said in a statement.

Dr. J. R. Morris, OU vice president for the university community, issued a statement Wednesday evening explaining the difference between a preliminary probe and a formal investigation.

"The difference between an initial inquiry and a formal inquirx is more than one of semantics," Morris said. "A formal inquiry means that the Committee of Infractions has made a formal decision that there is evidence to warrant an official inquiry and at that point the institution is notified and fully informed of the matter of inquiry.

"As a matter of fact, that committee decision had not been made on Oct. 25, and, so far as we know, has not yet been made. It is highly irregular and a violation of the NCAA's own procedures to report to a newspaper that an initial inquiry is being made."

Dave Cawood, NCAA public relations director, said Byers issued the statement only after his conversation with Dr. Sharp became public knowledge.

"When he talked to Dr. Sharp, he thought the conversation was a private one," Cawood said. "After published reports of the conversation were ready by him, he felt it was in order to set the record straight."

Morris said that an official inquiry can only be instituted by the Committee on Infractions.

Prior to any committee action, Morris added, an initial inquiry may be conducted by the investigative staff upon receiving complaints to determine whether there is adequate evidence to warrant an official inquiry.

He said that at the time of the Oct. 25 article by the Oklahoma City Times reporting an NCAA investigation, the Committee on Infractions had not made a decision on a formal probe.

Morris said he talked to Warren Brown, chief compliance officer for the NCAA, on Oct. 25 and was told that a complaint had been received by the NCAA and that certain "sources" were being consulted in an effort to evaluate the complaint.

Morris quoted Brown as telling him that "no decision has been made to investigate the University of Oklahoma."

Volleyball action continues

The number of high school vollyeball teams still in the running for a shot at the state tournament dwindled to twelve as action in the district tournaments at Holcomb at Essex continued last night.

At Holcomb, Bernie, New Madrid, Holcomb and Risco all advanced to the semifinals of the District 9 tournament with victories. New Madrid's victory was an upset as they knocked off third- seeded Gideon 10- 15, 15- 8, 15- 13. The other three winners took only two games to win.

At Richland High School, Richland and Bloomfield, two of the pre- tournament favorites, had little trouble in defeating University High and Notre Dame, respectively. East Prairie had to go three games to defeat Illmo- Scott City 14- 6, 15- 11, 15- 11 and Zalma won a hard-fought contest from Dexter 16- 14, 15- 10.

Last SHS win over Bluff was 14-12 in 1971

Tradition! It's an overworked word, but one that coach Terry Smith and his assistant coaches hope to call upon to help carry the Sikeston Bulldogs over Poplar Bluff Friday night. Sikeston teams since 1910 have won 392 games and established a precedence for winning unequalled in the history of Southeast Missouri football. Due to the absence of a junior high program and other variables, SHS football staggered during the early 70's and tradition lost its hold on Bulldog opponents and the team itself.

After 66 years of wins, victory number 393 might be the most important of all. The 1976 Bulldogs could become the first Sikeston team ever to qualify for the state playoffs. Curiously, as successful as Sikeston's high school athletic program has been, its history includes no state championships. The Bi- Centennial year would be a great time to start.

Friday night's meeting with the Mules will be the 53rd between the two sides. Sikeston has 32 wins, including a 33- 0 romp in the first meeting back in 1911. But, Poplar Bluff has dominated the series in recent years. 1971 was the last year of a Bulldog victory and the Mules have won seven of the last ten contests:

	BULLDOGS	MULES
1966	6	35
1967	6	0
1968	20	13
1969	13	14
1970	13	34
1971	14	12
1972	8	14
1973	6	14
1974	0	41

A win in the 7:30 contest would mean that Sikeston was a conference championship team for the first time since 1968, undefeated for the first time since 1967 and a ten- game winner for the first time since 1955. Most of the Bulldogs weren't even born in 1955, but don't think the traditions established back in those years can't be drawn upon for inspiration.

The high school has announced that advanced tickets for the game are available and can be picked up at the "A" building office at the High School until 4 p.m. Friday afternoon. Then you can go out and watch tradition at SHS be re- established!

OU president wants NCAA's probe to come out in the open

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — University of Oklahoma President Dr. Paul Sharp wired the National Collegiate Athletic Association Wednesday asking it to state whether or not it is formally investigating the OU football program.

In a telegram to Walter Byers, executive director of the NCAA, Dr. Sharp said: (The) "Oklahoma City Times reports today (Wednesday) that you have issued a prepared statement in which 'previous comments by officials at OU were branded inaccurate.'

"Please provide by returned telegram (collect) a copy of alleged prepared statement. Further by returned telegram (collect), please state in plain language whether or not the University of Oklahoma is under official investigation by NCAA as required by Section 3, official procedure governing the NCAA enforcement program, NCAA manual 1976-77."

Byers released a statement earlier Wednesday that said the NCAA is conducting a preliminary probe into allegations of ticket scalping by OU players.

He said Sharp called him on Oct. 25, the day the Oklahoma City Times first reported the NCAA was investigating the allegations.

"I advised him that allegations of noncompliance with NCAA requirements previously had been received by our office, that we were in the process of investigating them to determine the reliability of the sources of the allegations and the extent of supporting details for the charges and that results of those initial interviews would determine whether there was cause for the formal notification procedures of the NCAA enforcement program," Byers said in a statement.

Dr. J. R. Morris, OU vice president for the university community, issued a statement Wednesday evening explaining the difference between a preliminary probe and a formal investigation.

"The difference between an initial inquiry and a formal inquirx is more than one of semantics," Morris said. "A formal inquiry means that the Committee of Infractions has made a formal decision that there is evidence to warrant an official inquiry and at that point the institution is notified and fully informed of the matter of inquiry.

"As a matter of fact, that committee decision had not been made on Oct. 25, and, so far as we know, has not yet been made. It is highly irregular and a violation of the NCAA's own procedures to report to a newspaper that an initial inquiry is being made."

Dave Cawood, NCAA public relations director, said Byers issued the statement only after his conversation with Dr. Sharp became public knowledge.

"When he talked to Dr. Sharp, he thought the conversation was a private one," Cawood said. "After published reports of the conversation were ready by him, he felt it was in order to set the record straight."

Morris said that an official inquiry can only be instituted by the Committee on Infractions.

Prior to any committee action, Morris added, an initial inquiry may be conducted by the investigative staff upon receiving complaints to determine whether there is adequate evidence to warrant an official inquiry.

He said that at the time of the Oct. 25 article by the Oklahoma City Times reporting an NCAA investigation, the Committee on Infractions had not made a decision on a formal probe.

Morris said he talked to Warren Brown, chief compliance officer for the NCAA, on Oct. 25 and was told that a complaint had been received by the NCAA and that certain "sources" were being consulted in an effort to evaluate the complaint.

Morris quoted Brown as telling him that "no decision has been made to investigate the University of Oklahoma."

Volleyball action continues

The number of high school vollyeball teams still in the running for a shot at the state tournament dwindled to twelve as action in the district tournaments at Holcomb at Essex continued last night.

At Holcomb, Bernie, New Madrid, Holcomb and Risco all advanced to the semifinals of the District 9 tournament with victories. New Madrid's victory was an upset as they knocked off third- seeded Gideon 10- 15, 15- 8, 15- 13. The other three winners took only two games to win.

At Richland High School, Richland and Bloomfield, two of the pre- tournament favorites, had little trouble in defeating University High and Notre Dame, respectively. East Prairie had to go three games to defeat Illmo- Scott City 14- 6, 15- 11, 15- 11 and Zalma won a hard-fought contest from Dexter 16- 14, 15- 10.

Last SHS win over Bluff was 14-12 in 1971

Tradition! It's an overworked word, but one that coach Terry Smith and his assistant coaches hope to call upon to help carry the Sikeston Bulldogs over Poplar Bluff Friday night. Sikeston teams since 1910 have won 392 games and established a precedence for winning unequalled in the history of Southeast Missouri football. Due to the absence of a junior high program and other variables, SHS football staggered during the early 70's and tradition lost its hold on Bulldog opponents and the team itself.

After 66 years of wins, victory number 393 might be the most important of all. The 1976 Bulldogs could become the first Sikeston team ever to qualify for the state playoffs. Curiously, as successful as Sikeston's high school athletic program has been, its history includes no state championships. The Bi- Centennial year would be a great time to start.

Friday night's meeting with the Mules will be the 53rd between the two sides. Sikeston has 32 wins, including a 33- 0 romp in the first meeting back in 1911. But, Poplar Bluff has dominated the series in recent years. 1971 was the last year of a Bulldog victory and the Mules have won seven of the last ten contests:

	BULLDOGS	MULES
1966	6	35
1967	6	0
1968	20	13
1969	13	14
1970	13	34
1971	14	12
1972	8	14
1973	6	14
1974	0	41
1975	14	26

A win in the 7:30 contest would mean that Sikeston was a conference championship team for the first time since 1968, undefeated for the first time since 1967 and a ten- game winner for the first time since 1955. Most of the Bulldogs weren't even born in 1955, but don't think the traditions established back in those years can't be drawn upon for inspiration.

AL club prepare for expansion

NEW YORK (AP) — Lou Gorman has seen a lot of baseball lists in the last two weeks, but none is more appealing than today's available free agent players. Only this is one list Gorman can't touch.

Gorman is the director of player personnel for the expansion Seattle Mariners, who will be forced to come into the cold, competitive baseball world in 1977 with young hopefuls, old has-been and middle-aged mediocres.

That's the lot of all expansion teams. They are given a license to drive with the big boys, but then allowed to use only rollerskates or a broken-down Edsel.

"I wish we could have a shot at some of those free agents," said Gorman, whose infant club could grow up very quickly with the likes of Reggie Jackson, Joe Rudi or Don Gullett on the roster. "But these are the rules of the game."

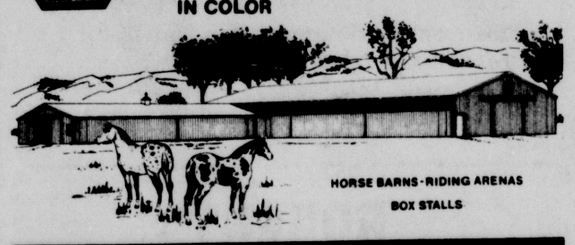

Seattle and its twin brother, Toronto, paid a hefty price to get into the American League. Part of that entrance fee for each team included $5.25 million for 30 players. Among the available players to the Mariners and Blue Jays will be Pat Dobson, Wilbur Wood, Brooks Robinson, Bill Melton, Boog Powell, Rico Carty, Paul Blair and Bill Freehan.

"The clubs did an excellent job of protecting their best players," said Gorman.

All 12 existing AL clubs have 15 untouchable players, along with all their minor leaguers signed after 1975. Each team must lose one player per round. When a team loses a player, it can protect three more after the first three rounds and two more after the fourth round.

"I'm somewhat disappointed," said Peter Bavasi, vice president and general manager of the Blue Jays.

Denver unbeaten

By The Associated Press

The undefeated Denver Nuggets have made a successful transition from the American Basketball Association to the National Basketball Association.

The upstart Nuggets, who joined the NBA this season in the merger of the leagues, are adjusting well to their new environment.

In fact, Denver is making winning look easy, as its 5-0 record attests. The Nuggets' latest victim was the New York Knicks, whom they beat 119-100 Wednesday night. Denver leads the Midwest Division by two games.

In other games, the New York Nets upended the Buffalo Braves 100-96, the Washington Bullets eased past the Milwaukee Bucks 117-105, the Indiana Pacers whipped the San Antonio Spurs 113-97, the Kansas City Kings topped the Seattle SuperSonics 126-106 and the Houston Rockets outlasted the Boston Celtics 117-111 in overtime.

Coach Larry Brown of Denver was succinct after the Knicks' game. "It's great meeting the Knicks. Now, we know we're in the NBA," he said.

The other clubs now know it, too.

Veteran forward Paul Silas sees Denver "as a potentially great team" that can compete on even terms with the Boston Celtics, the NBA champs he played for last season.

Except for Silas, the Nuggets consist of players who were in the ABA last season. Silas was obtained from Boston in a three-way deal also involving Detroit, with Ralph Simpson going from Denver to the Pistons, who sent Curtis Rowe to the Celtics.

Against the Knicks, the Nuggets bolted to a 23-point third-period lead and coasted the rest of the way before a record crowd of 17,808 in Denver.

David Thompson supplied most of the Nuggets' scoring impetus with 24 points and Dan Issel added 19. Five other players hit double figures in the balanced Denver attack.

Walt Frazier of New York topped all scorers with 27 points, while Earl Monroe was limited to 14.

Nets 100, Braves 96

John Williamson scored a season-high 36 points, triggering New York past Buffalo. The Nets snapped a three-game losing streak and handed the Braves their fourth successive setback.

Bullets 117, Bucks 105

Elvin Hayes was a virtual one-man show for Washington against Milwaukee. He scored 31 points, snared 14 rebounds and blocked six shots.

We are proud that number sixty seven, tackle on the mighty Bulldogs is a part time employee with our company. We are proud of Paul Sherman on the field and off the field.

We are going to the game Friday and we are encouraging all of our employees to go.
We think the Bulldogs are deserving of and will need all the support they can receive this Friday nite, Nov 5th.
So Paul you and the boys pour it on. We will be pulling for you.

Panel divided on five of eight games this week

There will be no pictures of anybody eating any words this week, but that doesn't mean that the Forb hasn't been told (once or twice) about his glaring miss on the Sikeston- Jackson game last week.

The miscalculation, the only one for all three panel members, dropped Forb into a first- place tie with T- Bone. Both have hit 65 of 79 picks. The Chief has been good on 64.

There are eight games on tap for this week, but only one as far as Sikeston fans are concerned. Billed as the "game of the decade," Friday night's Sikeston- Poplar Bluff game oughta be a doosey---- and the Forb has switched sides again.

CAPE CENTRAL AT CHARLESTON– "This is where I catch you guys," says the Chief to his compadres. The Jays have paid for their youth with inconsistent performances and Forb and T- Bone think they'll be up for this one. They still have something to prove and the panel thinks they will do it.

CHIEF: Cape by 4.
FORB: Charleston by 6.
T-BONE: Charleston by 7.

KENNETT AT DEXTER--- The Forb sticks up for the Cats while Chief and T- Bone go for Kennett. This is the "Loser's Bowl," with the team that drops this game destined to finish in last place of the Northern division.

CHIEF: Kennett by 10.
FORB: Dexter by 7.
T- BONE: Kennett by 14.

JACKSON AT PERRYVILLE--- Jackson will be down after two tough losses and the Buccos are always strong at home. However, the Injuns are the best team Sikeston has seen so far this year and they should prevail.

CHIEF: Jackson by 8.
FORB: Jackson by 6.
T- BONE: Jackson by 7.

CHAFFEE AT CARUTHERSVILLE--- The panel is split again, with two of the three going for Chaffee. "My mouth really waters when I think about playing a school one-third our size," Tiger coach Harv Welch has said. The Red Devils should have cured his mouth problems by half, so to speak.

CHIEF: Caruthersville by 2.
FORB: Chaffee by 5.
T- BONE: Chaffee by 12.

MALDEN AT EAST PRAIRIE--- Malden faltered last week and the whole panel decided to go with The Eagles.

CHIEF: East Prairie by 5.
FORB: East Prairie by 7.
T- BONE: East Prairie by 6.

HAYTI AT DONIPHAN---- Who's gonna win this one? Two go for Hayti only because our rules of predicting etiquette won't allow Forb to call this a scoreless tie. Bad defenses ought to insure a high- scoring, exciting game.

CHIEF: Hayti by 10.
FORB: Hayti by 1. (48- 47)
T- BONE: Doniphan by 6.

ILLMO- SCOTT CITY AT PORTAGEVILLE--- Without Dave Ellington, the Bulldogs don't have a whisper of a chance.

CHIEF: I-SC by 17.
FORB: I-SC by 7.
T- BONE: I-SC by 7.

POPLAR BLUFF AT SIKESTON--- "Sikeston by 11 seconds," shouts the Bone. Forb flatly refuses to pick against the Bulldogs after his experiences of last week. Nobody knows what happened, but the mere mention of a Red Pepper sends the Forb over in the corner, shivering with fear. What did you all do, girls?

CHIEF: Poplar Bluff by 6.
FORB: Sikeston by ½ point.
T- BONE: Sikeston by 7. (In other words, a breather.)

We got some unsolicited help this week from Charles Blanton III, business manager of the Standard.

"Sikeston will LOSE 21- 19," says Three- eye.

"They haven't played up to their potential all year long and there's no reason to think they will now."

That mailing address is: Charles (Moving Soon) Blanton III, 205 S. New Madrid St., Sikeston, Mo., 63801.

The Forb just makes some whimpering noises and sinks lower into the corner...

Cardinal punter gains confidence

Terry Joyce

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Tall, mustachioed Terry Joyce believes a blocked punt may have been just the experience he needed.

The St. Louis Cardinal rookie suffered the fate three weeks ago in a game against the Dallas Cowboys and has improved his specialty since.

"We went over some films, trying to figure out what went wrong," said Joyce, whose embarrassment was inflicted by the Cowboys' Charlie Waters in a game Oct. 17.

"Since then we're using a watch in practice for timing. We've put it back into a game-type situation, and it's helped me a lot."

Joyce, a former college division standout, averaged a mediocre 35.7 yards a punt through seven games and half of the National Football League season.

Last week, however, his proficiency was sorely needed in an overtime game against the San Francisco 49ers, and he responded with seven spirals averaging 42 yards.

"It wasn't my best day for average or best day for hang time," said Joyce, whose final high spiral was fumbled by 49er return specialist Anthony Leonard, setting up a 23-20 Cards victory.

"Still, when it was over I had to feel pretty good. I was getting my confidence back and my timing felt better than it has all year."

Joyce, the son of an Internal Revenue Service agent, reported to St. Louis' free agent tryouts last spring after first studying NFL punting statistics.

"It happened that the New York Giants were talking to me at the same time, and they even invited me to fly back and talk it over," he recalled.

"New York said to either say yes or no. But when St. Louis came through with a contract, I took their offer instead."

A former schoolboy punt, pass and kick contest state champion, Joyce averaged 43.4 yards a punt last fall at Missouri Southern.

"You look at the colleges and see kids averaging 40, 41 or 42 yards a kick," he mused, "but those figures don't take into consideration the times they let the ball roll.

"It seemed like in preseason I wasn't as tight as I have been in the regular season," Joyce said.

"I know we've got to win now," he added. "I told myself when I went in there last week I was either going to be a goat or a hero. We were backed up so far toward our goal I thought the fans were going to reach out and touch me."

The 22-year-old Joyce, 6-foot-6 and 230 pounds, is listed also as a tight end and considers his size in his favor.

"I think it's a definite advantage, especially with smaller rosters," he suggested. "Even though I don't think I'll ever play tight end, it's better than being 6-1 and 210."

On this date:

In 1520, Christian II was crowned King of Sweden.

In 1825, the first boat to reach New York City by using the Erie Canal arrived nine days after leaving Buffalo.

In 1884, Democrat Grover Cleveland was elected President.

In 1931, the League of Nations accused Japan of aggression in Manchuria.

In 1944, in World War II, the Allies announced that Greece had been completely liberated from the Nazis.

In 1973, Senator Edward Brooke of Massachusetts became the first Republican Senator to publicly urge the resignation of President Richard M. Nixon.

Ten years ago: The Soviet Union cast its 104th veto in the United Nations Security Council, killing a compromise resolution aimed at easing tensions between Israel and the Arab nations.

Five years ago: India's Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, conferring with President Richard M. Nixon in Washington, appealed for U.S. understanding in India's confrontation with Pakistan.

One year ago: The United States closed its mission in Angola because of the violent struggle between three rival liberation groups.

Thought for today: I always prefer to believe the best of everybody — it saves so much trouble. — Rudyard Kiping, English writer, 1865-1936.

BRITAIN's Prime Minister James Callaghan has at least one bright spot to contemplate in the general gloom of the British economic situation. Oil from the new North Sea fields is reported coming in at a faster rate than expected and will save the exchequer an estimated $1.65 billion in foreign exchange next year.

IS THERE a crown in her future? Davina Sheffield, a frequent companion of Britain's Prince Charles in recent years, is the subject of increasing speculation in the British press despite denial from Buckingham Palace that a marriage is in the making for the heir to the throne and the 25-year-old socialite.

BRITAIN's Prime Minister James Callaghan has at least one bright spot to contemplate in the general gloom of the British economic situation. Oil from the new North Sea fields is reported coming in at a faster rate than expected and will save the exchequer an estimated $1.65 billion in foreign exchange next year.

IS THERE a crown in her future? Davina Sheffield, a frequent companion of Britain's Prince Charles in recent years, is the subject of increasing speculation in the British press despite denial from Buckingham Palace that a marriage is in the making for the heir to the throne and the 25-year-old socialite.

NEED MORE BATHING FACILITIES? ADD A SHOWER STALL

Some psychiatrists claim that competing for the bathroom is one of the unnamed causes of divorce, lumped under the catch-all of "mental cruelty."

This is probably an exaggeration. However, according to the Plumbing-Heating Cooling Information Bureau, surveys do show that feuding over the bathroom is a major cause of family friction, especially where there are two or more growing childern.

Ideally, the solution is the addition of one or more bathrooms. Where family finances do not permit this, the answer is a shower stall, preferably with receptor tub. The Bureau points out that a plumbing contractor usually can install a shower in the basement or attic, often next to existing pipe.

At one time, taking a shower could be a "risky business." Whenever water was being used elsewhere in the house, a drop in pressure could cause sudden dousings of icy cold or scalding hot water.

Today, according to Peter Warshaw of Powers-Fiat, a pioneer in the shower control field, there are temperature controls that enable the bather to select the temperature he wants before turning on the water. It then remains constant regardless of pressure changes.

For free information on automatic temperature controls write to the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau, 35 E. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. 60601.

Free booklet is published on motorcycle safety

PUEBLO, Colo. — There was a time when it seemed that only your most daring of friends rode motorcycles. Now chances are your next door neighbor or your boss might ride his or her "bike" to work. And you just might be shopping around for one yourself. Unfortunately as the popularity of motorcycleshas gone up, so have the accident and death rates.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration has put out a new booklet that gives advice on what you should know both before and after you begin driving a motorcycle. It also includes information on how to buy the right motorcycle to fit your needs. For your free copy of Motorcycle Safety, send a postcard to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 61, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

A helmet is the most important piece of individual protective equipment. Statistics confirm that safety helmets save lives and reduce the extent of injuries in the event of accidents.

Many good helmets are available. In chooseing a helmet, buy one which contains the Symbol "DOT" on the outer rear surface or one containing a safety certification inside indicating approval by one of the several non-governmental organizations interested in helmet safety, such as the Snell Memorial Foundation or the National Safety Helmet Council of America.

If you will be carrying a passenger, he or she should also wear a helmet.

Part of your clothing for daytime cycling should be orange or some other eye-catching color. Reflective tape on clothing, helmet and the motorcycle help make you visible at night. And always drive with your lights on. A high percentage of car to cycle collisions happens because the auto driver failed to see the motorcyclist in time.

Avoid offensive driving. Don't weave in and outoftrafficstalled in traffic jams, or drive on shoulders to get ahead of the traffic. Avoid tailgating and excessive lane weaving in traffic.

Think about installing rim-locks so the tire will stay on the rim after a blowout. And, if the crisis of a blowout strikes, don't use your brakes. Ease off the throttle and slow down gradually. When your speed is low enough, carefully pull off the road. Keep a firm grip on the handlebars throughout.

BICENTENNIAL FACTS

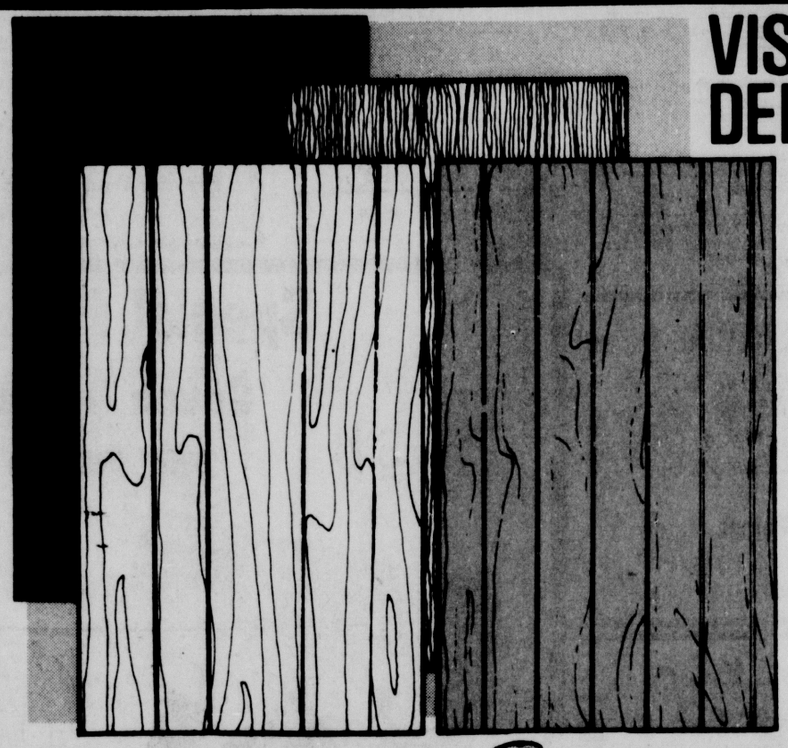

"Linear tactics" evolved in the 18th century European army with the development of firearms. The line of battle consisted of two or three ranks, or lines of men, drawn up shoulder to shoulder. Casualties in the line were replaced by reserve ranks. With fixed bayonets the attackers moved forward, keeping their alignment, relatively safe from enemy musketry up to 100 years away.

The World Almanac notes that this was the drill for British troops in combat and that it was ineffective against guerrilla or Indian tactics.

NEED MORE BATHING FACILITIES? ADD A SHOWER STALL

Some psychiatrists claim that competing for the bathroom is one of the unnamed causes of divorce, lumped under the catch-all of "mental cruelty."

This is probably an exaggeration. However, according to the Plumbing-Heating Cooling Information Bureau, surveys do show that feuding over the bathroom is a major cause of family friction, especially where there are two or more growing childern.

Ideally, the solution is the addition of one or more bathrooms. Where family finances do not permit this, the answer is a shower stall, preferably with receptor tub. The Bureau points out that a plumbing contractor usually can install a shower in the basement or attic, often next to existing pipe.

At one time, taking a shower could be a "risky business." Whenever water was being used elsewhere in the house, a drop in pressure could cause sudden dousings of icy cold or scalding hot water.

Today, according to Peter Warshaw of Powers-Fiat, a pioneer in the shower control field, there are temperature controls that enable the bather to select the temperature he wants before turning on the water. It then remains constant regardless of pressure changes.

For free information on automatic temperature controls write to the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau, 35 E. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. 60601.

Free booklet is published on motorcycle safety

PUEBLO, Colo. — There was a time when it seemed that only your most daring of friends rode motorcycles. Now chances are your next door neighbor or your boss might ride his or her "bike" to work. And you just might be shopping around for one yourself. Unfortunately as the popularity of motorcycles has gone up, so have the accident and death rates.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration has put out a new booklet that gives advice on what you should know both before and after you begin driving a motorcycle. It also includes information on how to buy the right motorcycle to fit your needs. For your free copy of Motorcycle Safety, send a postcard to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 61, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

A helmet is the most important piece of individual protective equipment. Statistics confirm that safety helmets save lives and reduce the extent of injuries in the event of accidents.

Many good helmets are available. In chooseing a helmet, buy one which contains the Symbol "DOT" on the outer rear surface or one containing a safety certification inside indicating approval by one of the several non-governmental organizations interested in helmet safety, such as the Snell Memorial Foundation or the National Safety Helmet Council of America.

If you will be carrying a passenger, he or she should also wear a helmet.

Part of your clothing for daytime cycling should be orange or some other eye-catching color. Reflective tape on clothing, helmet and the motorcycle help make you visible at night. And always drive with your lights on. A high percentage of car to cycle collisions happens because the auto driver failed to see the motorcyclist in time.

Avoid offensive driving. Don't weave in and out of traffic stalled in traffic jams, or drive on shoulders to get ahead of the traffic. Avoid tailgating and excessive lane weaving in traffic.

Think about installing rim-locks so the tire will stay on the rim after a blowout. And, if the crisis of a blowout strikes, don't use your brakes. Ease off the throttle and slow down gradually. When your speed is low enough, carefully pull off the road. Keep a firm grip on the handlebars throughout.
